ELECTRIC POWER.

The Hydro Electric Commission gives prices for Power for Napanee.

The Seymour and Hydro Electric prices Compared.

The movement for cheap Electric Power for Eastern Ontario was advanced another step on Friday last, when representatives of the Eastern Ontario towns met Hon. Adam Beck at Brockville. Mr. Beck came armed with two sources from which power may be obtained, and three lists of prices. The first steps looking to the securing of cheap power were made there on December 15, when the union of Eastern Ontario municipalities was formed, with Mr. R. F. Elliott, Acting Chairman, and Mr. William Shearer, Brockville, Secretary. At that meeting representatives were present from Kingston, Napanee, Lansdowne, Brockville, Lyn, Prescott, Cardinal, Morrisburg and Athens. In addition to these places, there were present today Mayors or Reeves from Chesterville, Gananoque, Kemptville, Mallorytown, Merrickville, Newboro', Perth, Smith's Falls, Winchester and Bloomfield.

MR. BECK'S OFFER.

Hon. Mr. Beck was accompanied by Mr. P. W. Sothman, Chairman of the Commission, and stated that a contract had been made with the New York & Ontario Power Company of Waddington, N. Y., with the option of securing 15,000 horsepower at a total cost of $657,000. In addition, Mr. M. F. Beach, owner of a power course at High Falls, had made an offer which would also cover the eastern portion of the Province, with a distributing station at Kingston.

Mr. Beck then read the contract made with the New York & Ontario Power Company, of which Mr. J. Wesley Allison of Morrisburg is the promoter. Mr. Beck claimed this contract was more advantageous than any made in western Ontario. The rates through this contract would be higher than from the Niagara source, but transmission would be cheaper on account of the shorter distance. After ten months, from the signing of the contract the company deposits $100,000 that they will supply and deliver at Morrisburg from 2,000 to 5,000 horsepower, and later, upon one month's notice from the Commission, to deliver in blocks until the maximum offer is reached. Inside of eighteen months the Commission must give notice to the company that they will go on with the work.

THE FIGURES QUOTED.

The figures quoted by Mr. Beck are as follows:—Two thousand horse power or over $13 per horse power; 4,000, $12.50; 6,000 to 10,000, $12; 10,000, $11; over 10,000, $10.50. This contract must be given for eighteen months.

Three schedules of rates for the municipalities forming the union were given. First the amount of horse

DEATH OF MRS. ARCHIBALD McNEILL.

Time, the inevitable spirit of change has brought to the hearts of her relatives and friends a great and real sorrow in the death of Mrs. Archibald McNeill last Thursday morning, April 6th. To Napanee the loss of an old and much esteemed resident and to St. Patrick's congregation a faithful adherent. Fortified by the spiritual consolations of the church she loved she passed peacefully to her eternal reward after two weeks illness, surrounded by her brother, Daniel, and sister, Mrs. Kinsella, nieces, nephews and relatives. The late Mrs. Archibald McNeill was born in Adolphustown seventy-six years ago, where she married Mr. McNeill, who predeceased her twenty-five years ago. She had been a resident of Napanee over thirty-five years and during all that time she has retained the respect of all classes and creeds. Through all the activities of a very busy and strenuous life the deceased has gone to the grave with a clear record for strict, homely, square dealing and uprightness of character, and the example of her great and well ordered life cannot but influence for good. Always the bright word and cheery greeting her kind and genial presence will be missed for many long years. The late Mrs. McNeill was a generous and devoted member of St. Patrick's church and always took a deep interest in its temporal and spiritual welfare. If actions are the measure of love, then the enthusiasm which inspired the deceased to donate to St. Patrick's church one year ago those magnificent paintings of the fourteen stations of the way of the cross, indicates her deep regard and loving appreciation of the sufferings of the Saviour. The oil paintings which endow the walls of St. Patrick's church are a work of real artistic beauty and shall remain as a lasting memorial of the pious and generous munificence of the good departed benefactress. The funeral took place from her late residence, Fountain Hall, last Saturday morning, to St. Patrick's church and although the busiest morning in the week the cortege was a lengthy one. Representatives of the town's people from all stations in life were in line and filled the church. Requiem high mass was sung by the pastor, Rev. Father O'Connor. The solemn libera was chanted, after which all that was mortal of Mrs. A. McNeill was respectfully placed in the vault to be later lowered into the grave beside the remains of her beloved husband. She leaves behind to mourn her one brother, Daniel Davern, Adolphustown, one sister, Mrs. Kinsella, Trenton, and a large number of nieces and nephews to all of whom the sincere and heartfelt sympathy of the community is tendered.

Liquid Veneer for Pianos.

Liquid Veneer is a high grade furniture polish good enough to use on the piano or the best piece of furniture in the house. It brightens everything up. To be had in Napanee at Wallace's Drug Store in 25c, 50c and $1.00 bottles.

THE FIGURES QUOTED.

The figures quoted by Mr. Beck are as follows:—Two thousand horse power or over $13 per horse power; 4,000, $12.50; 6,000 to 10,000, $12; 10,000, $11; over 10,000, $10.50. This contract must be given for eighteen months.

Three schedules of rates for the municipalities forming the union were given: first, the amount of horse power asked for; second, providing an increase of 50 per cent. is taken and, thirdly, an increase of 100 per cent., as follows:—

	Horse power
Kingston	1,200	$6.25	$23.75	$15.20
Napanee	200	$6.25	28.44	22.00
Lansdowne	100	55.38	34.13	26.81
Brockville	1,000	20.40	17.40	15.37
Lyn	100	22.43	18.83	16.31
Prescott	500	18.17	15.86	13.50
Cardinal	100	16.18	14.50	12.90
Morrisburg	2,000	16.18	12.03	11.67
Athens	75	30.07	30.05	24.60

DURATION OF CONTRACT.

Proceeding, Mr. Beck stated that the contract was for ten years, with the option of continuing for one, two or three similar periods, providing three years notice is given before the expiration of the first ten years. If no notice is given, the contract automatically goes into effect for thirty years. The offer of the High Falls Company will be considered on the same terms and conditions. Payments are to be made within thirty years, but nothing will be expected during the first five years. This will give Gananoque, Picton and other places from which figures were not asked, and which may be bound by some franchise, an opportunity to get Hydro-electric power.

Under the above named rates, as the town only uses from 100 to 125 horse power peak load it would be necessary in case power be taken to assume responsibility of selling all power which may be contracted for above the amount now used and if less than 200 horse power were contracted for the price per horse power would be much higher than the figures given above. In the above price the cost of maintenance, interest and sinking fund on the transmission line is placed at $4800 per year, to which is added the cost of the power at Morrisburg, making the scheme rather an expensive one to the town.

THE SEYMOUR CO'S OFFER.

The Seymour Power Co. offer the town any quantity of power over 100 horse power at $25.00 per horse power. They have the right to supply users of power who require over 25 h.p., this right not to be an exclusive franchise. The town would supply all power users requiring 25 h.p. or under and thus find a market for the power in day time when the power is not used for lighting purposes. It will be seen from this that the Seymour company assume the responsibility of finding customers to dispose of power enough over the amount they will receive from the town to reimburse them for the necessary large outlay in building and equipping transmission lines and sub station. We understand that there is some variance between the Commissioners and the Seymour Co., in reference to who shall pay for the services of the electrician in charge of the power station, but no doubt this difficulty can be amicably arranged.

We have given here the prices for power from both companies. Hydro electric power at a cost of $36.23 per h. p., or for 200 h. p., or $7246 per year or an increased amount per h. p. for a less amount. Seymour power to cost for 100 h. p., $25.00 per h. p., $2500 per year or $5000 per year for 200 h. p. The town to supply all users of any quantity of power under Hydro electric contract, or all users of 25 h.p. under the Seymour power contract. The Commissioners and Council should carefully examine both proposed contracts and choose the one best suited to the interests of the town and have a by-law submitted to the people at the earliest possible time.

Paul's Stock of wall paper is the finest ever shown in Napanee, 5c, to $3.00 roll.

J. L. BOYES, RECIPROCITY AT ODESSA

Hon. A. G. MacKay, Dr. Currie, and Others Speak.

A meeting was held at Odessa on the 12th instant, in the Town Hall, to hear some able speakers on this subject.

The meeting was called by the Reform Association of Lennox and Addington, who arranged for the speakers for this occasion. The President of the Reform Association, Mr. H. B. Sherwood, formally opened the meeting stating it was a meeting intentionally non-political and was called as an educational factor in favor of Reciprocity, and to give the yeomanry in particular, the opportunity of becoming thoroughly conversant with the subject matter and its benefits. Although it was desired not to make a political meeting it must necessarily have a trend that way as the opposition had made it a political question instead of accepting it as an economic question which must of necessity be of great value to all. The criticisms of the opponents of the pact must be answered and that would tend to make it a reform subject matter.

Mr. Sherwood then called Colonel Clyde to the platform, one of Odessa's most respectable citizens, that the local nature of the meeting might be maintained. After a few most complimentary remarks by the chairman to the ladies and gentlemen present and who filled the hall, he introduced Dr. Currie.

But on His brow a crown shines now
And bending hosts adore:
"Thou He, 'tis He, who on the tree
The thorn-crown meekly wore."
O wondrous Jere Jerusalem,
Shall I thy gates pass through?
Thy jubilation surely join,
Thy lordly splendour view.
O Crucified, O Crucified,
May I thy face behold.
And join the ransomed as they sing
Along the streets of gold. Amen.

...the opponents of the peace movement...
...answered and that would tend to make it a reform subject matter.

Mr. Sherwood then called Colonel Clyde to the platform, one of Odessa's most respective citizens, that the local nature of the meeting might be maintained. After a few most complimentary remarks by the chairman to the ladies and gentlemen present and who filled the hall, he introduced Dr. Currie, of Prince Edward County. Dr. Currie made a good and exhaustive statistical speech, showing in a practical, comparative way the advantages to accrue through the mutual endorsement of the pact by both countries, the U. S. and Canada.

It was surely an illuminated address on the merits of the pact in an economic sense. He spoke for its acceptance as a great measure to add to the prosperity of this country.

J. McD. Mowat, K. C., of Kingston, followed in a bright and exhaustive speech on the subject, which was enjoyed by the assembly and was accorded the same hearty demonstration given Dr. Currie.

Then the chairman introduced Hon. A. G. McKay, M. P., leader of the opposition in Toronto legislature. He had not spoken long before the logic of his arguments enthused the audience to a reception of the subject matter so as to make every Conservative in that meeting realize that they had been sold by their representatives in the blind policy of following their autocratic leader in the legislature.

Honourable James Whitney, and their disgruntled leader, Hon. R. L. Borden, in the Dominion parliament in their opposition to this measure to be so fruitful of good to their country, just because as political puppets they were called on to vote with their party leader, they come forward like school boys and hold up their hands. He called upon all men to think for themselves and not let the senile ghosts of their dead great grandfathers decide their policy and their actions in affairs affecting their own good, and to allow their own intelligence to decide on momentous issues. His, Mr. McKay's, advocacy of the measure was simply invincible, and his arraignment of the opposition was equal to the sting which Sir Jas. P. Whitney found in the motion of amendment introduced by Mr. McKay in his reply to the speech against reciprocity and which stinger Sir James has since been unable to pull from his armor of self righteousness and at which time his self exaltation exhibited itself in his usual BLUFF which is always his armour proof, or so he considers when annihilation overtakes him. Mr. McKay's speech was simply great and met with a reception worthy of the yeomanry of Lennox.

A motion was then introduced favoring reciprocity by Mr. Spears, of Odessa, and seconded by Mr. Montgomery, and carried unanimously. Fifty per cent of the meeting were Conservatives. The chairman then called for three cheers for the King which were given with vim. Then three cheers were given for Mr. McKay with enthusiasm.

Mr. M. S. Madole occupied a position on the platform but declined to make any remarks after the exhaustive speeches on the subject and owing to lateness of hour.

Belleville, April 10. An unfortunate affair, resulting in the immediate death of Russell Vickers, a lad of fourteen years of age, occurred on Saturday. The victim, with a companion named Arthur Plunton, also of this city, was playing at war, and both had guns which were supposed to be unloaded. There was a shell in the gun handled by Plunton, and he discharged it at short range at Vickers, who received the contents in the chest, which made a gaping wound and caused instant death. The shell had been placed in the gun by Vickers, who did not tell his playmate that he had done so. Dr. Yeoman, coroner, on the advice of the county attorney, will conduct an inquest.

An Easter Tea and Concert.

USING PURGATIVES INJURES HEALTH

What You Need in Spring is a Blood Building Tonic

A spring medicine is an actual necessity to most people. Nature demands it as an aid in carrying off the impurities that have accumulated in the blood during the long winter months of indoor life. Unfortunately thousands of people who recognize the necessity for a spring medicine do not know what is best to take and dose themselves with harsh, griping purgatives.

This is a serious mistake. Ask any doctor and he will tell you that the use of purgative medicines weakens the system, but does not cure disease. In the spring the system needs building up—purgatives cannot do this—they weaken you still more. The blood should be made rich, red, pure and only a tonic medicine can do this. The best blood building, nerve restoring tonic medical science has yet discovered is Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Every dose of this medicine actually makes new, rich blood. This new blood strengthens every organ, every nerve and every part of the body. This is why Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure headaches and backaches, rheumatism and neuralgia, banish pimples and eruptions, and give a glow of health to pale and sallow cheeks. Men, women and growing boys and girls who take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills eat well, sleep well, and feel bright, active and strong. If you need a medicine this spring—and most likely you do—try this great reviving tonic and feel the new life, new health, and new strength it will put into you.

Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

FESTIVAL OF EMPIRE.

Iron Workers Engaged in Turning Out Armor for Knights.

Elaborate preparations are now being made for the pageant of London, which is to be one of the principal features of the forthcoming Festival of Empire, to be held at the Crystal Palace, from May to October next, under the patronage and with the support of His Majesty's Government—a distinction rarely accorded to events of this kind.

The pageant promises to be one of the greatest historical spectacles ever witnessed, for neither money nor pains are being spared in the effort to make the 24 scenes which are to be enacted, accurate representations of the various periods selected. The costumes and dresses for this huge undertaking are in themselves a very big item and some idea of the work that is being done in the way of dressing the pageant in the exact mode of the respective periods, may be gathered from the fact that there are no fewer than 15,000 performers taking part in the various scenes.

In order that every little detail of the costumes may be absolutely accurate, a Research Committee was formed, whose duty it was to trace in the various museums and

FORTUNE FAVORS THE BRAVE; OR, A LOOK INTO THE PAST

Patrician in every fibre, Dorothy's whole nature was jarred by this embodiment of vulgarity, and the strange, sinister look which flashed occasionally from his glittering black eyes, seemed to warn her that not only was the parvenu objectionable, but he could be dangerous, also.

"Thank you," she replied, coldly. "I will not trespass on your kindness, Mr. Crawshaw. My cousin, or one of the grooms, will satisfy me, I know."

Crawshaw's brow contracted, and the smile turned to an ugly expression, but he said nothing; and Miss Leicester, feeling an irrepressible sensation of satisfaction in that she had snubbed him, turned again to Lord Merefield, and to his intense delight, entered into a brisk conversation.

"I should hate to let that man do anything for me or for Nancy," she thought to herself. "I should have a horror that, instead of doing her good, Dr. Knowles would make her worse, if Mr. Crawshaw went to fetch him. How I wish he would go home! I can't bear to see his swarthy face and black eyes about the place. I feel sometimes as if I could strike him, when I see him patronizing dear old dad in the horrible way he does. What on earth has come over Aunt Anne that she should be so civil to him. Brute! I suppose I am very un-ladylike; but I can't help it if I am."

And having arrived at this conclusion, Dorothy arose from the table.

"You will excuse me, Aunt Anne; I am going into the grounds to ask Murdock to cut me some grapes for Nancy. Come along, Merefield, I want you."

Mr. Crawshaw looked across to Mrs. Darnley as they were alone.

"Miss Leicester don't exactly cotton to me yet," he said, with a sneer.

Mrs. Darnley gave a shiver at the words and tone, but made no reply.

"However," continued the millionaire, as he poured out a strong dose of brandy and water, "that don't trouble me much. I can do without her. Perhaps she'll be a little more civil to me in the future."

He laughed a hard, triumphant laugh as he spoke.

"You have succeeded admirably." Mrs. Darnley's voice was soft, and now she rose from her seat and moved to the open window, with her usual haughty air.

"I suppose you do not intend to risk any delay or—"

"Or, don't be feared, your son is safe!" sneered Crawshaw. "His reign is over, for good and all, and I don't mean to delay any longer than I like."

Mrs. Darnley was silent for a mo-gether there was something strange about the whole affair which she could not understand.

As she stood there hesitating, her maid came out of an adjoining room.

"I beg your pardon, Miss Dorothy," she said, in a whisper, "but I fancies Miss Hamilton have dropped off to sleep. She said as how I was to give you her love, and say she should try and get a hour's rest if she could."

"Oh, very well Baines; see that there is no noise made outside the door. I do not want her to be disturbed," and Dorothy, giving the grapes to the maid, turned and retraced her steps slowly.

Something very like a tear grew in each eye. She had become so linked to Nancy—their simple lives had been drawn so close together during the last few months—that she felt strangely rebuffed and sorrowful at the first break in their affectionate intercourse.

"I know I don't know anything about nursing as she does," she said to herself, "but I—I think I could have done some little thing for her if she would only let me go in."

Then, as she went downstairs, she cleared the shade from her brow, and brushed any reproachful thought from her heart.

"She does it because she knows I would fret if I saw her ill; and, after all, she is best asleep, dear Nancy. She will probably be quite her old self to-night."

If Dorothy could have penetrated the thickness of the door that divided her from her friend, the feeling of anxiety and pain she had suffered at the bare suggestion of illness would have been intensified beyond all description.

Nancy was not asleep; she was not even on the dainty, white-hung bed where of late she had passed such happy nights, visited by girlish, joyous dreams.

She was sitting on a low chair, her red-brown tresses strewn in rough disorder on her shoulders, her two small, cold, trembling hands supporting her aching head; her two large, lustrous eyes fixed on the carpet at her feet with an expression so strained, so unnatural, that at one glimpse the bluntest intelligence might have read the despairing agony that crowded her breast.

How she struggled from the rose garden to the safe haven of her own room Nancy never knew. She hoped to have escaped detection, more especially from Dorothy's loving eyes; but to her sorrow that was not to be.

The first free moment she had from Mrs. Darnley's strangely persistent claims on her courtesy, Dorothy flew up to Nancy's room, and arrived just in time to see our poor heroine stagger, rather than walk, up the stairs, with her white share of life's sorrows; tears that sprang from a broken heart; a heart brave, strong, noble, yet crushed beneath the burden that had fallen upon it.

CHAPTER XII.

The rest of the house party arrived at the Hall in good time for dinner; the Misses Chester were in marvellous spirits, but Lady Burton was blandly annoyed, and Mrs. Fairfax downright irritable, and the cause of this was not very difficult to determine; neither Lord Merefield or Mr. Crawshaw had exhibited the faintest wish to attend as escort to Lady Burton and her fair Amazonian daughters; and in the absence of Derrick Darnley Mrs. Fairfax had been left without an available cavalier, which was as unusual as it was annoying to the pretty faded little matron.

Dorothy was out on the lawn with her father when the guests returned; she had been pouring out her anxiety to him about Nancy's illness, and both of them were rejoicing at that very moment, for she had just shown herself at her window, and waved her hand to them.

Sir Humphrey's good-natured face wore an expression of vexation so new to it that Dorothy, twining her arm in his, and her mind freed from further care on Nancy's account, determined to know what it meant.

"It is nothing, my darling," her father replied, hastily, but that did not exactly please Dorothy.

"You don't look like that for nothing, dad," she observed; "quick, before the others come!"

"Well," Sir Humphrey said, slowly, "I have been a trifle ashamed and disgusted, that is all!"

"You!" Dorothy's tone was pride itself. "You ashamed, daddy!"

"I was in the stable yard just now; I rode Cherry in there to save Foster the bother of coming to fetch her at the steps, and I arrived just in time to see Mr. Crawshaw behave like the brute he must be; he had chained his collicie up all this long, hot day. Foster tells me he has been itching to let the poor beast go, and then, because she happened to jump at him, to welcome him, no doubt, he kicked her so severely, and so savagely, that I am much afraid it will be all over with her."

ered from the fact that there are no fewer than 15,000 performers taking part in the various scenes.

In order that every little detail of the costumes may be absolutely accurate, a Research Committee was formed, whose duty it was to trace in the various museums and private houses old master pieces and tapestries portraying characters and scenes in stirring times long gone by. Then a large staff of artists, all specialists in this kind of work, was engaged to make copies from the paintings, and from these colored drawings the designs for the dresses were executed.

Of the ten thousand or more costumes required for the pageant there are nearly seven thousand already completed, work which necessitated a staff of over 200 workers being engaged practically night and day during the past twelve months. All the material employed in the manufacture is of the finest quality, and all the principals, and there are many hundreds of them, will be clad in the finest satins, silks and richest velvets, compatible with the dignity of the characters they are impersonating.

It will thus be seen that the cost of dressing the pageant alone is a very big item of expenditure, for the dresses range in price from £2 to 30 guineas, the latter price having been paid for the outfit for the lady who will play the part of Queen Elizabeth.

Another important item is the armor for the knights. It is doubtful if there is sufficient available armor in the country for the hundreds of characters that will be thus clad in the pageant, so that it was decided to manufacture special suits for the occasion. In order to do this a special armory has been established at the Crystal Palace, where no fewer than 80 workmen are busily engaged in turning out the mail armors. The chain armors, another big item in itself, has been contracted out.

A BOOK FOR MOTHERS.

Every mother is naturally anxious for information that will enable her to keep the little ones in good health. The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co. have issued a little book which contains a great deal of information on the care of babies and young children that every mother ought to know. The book will be sent free to any mother who will send her name and address, with the name of this newspaper, to The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

HIS AMBITION.

"What is his ambition?"

"Just the same as everybody—to have more money than his neighbor."

Count that day lost whose low descending sun

Views from thy hand no worthy action done.

her usual haughty air. "I suppose you do not intend to risk any delay or—"

"Or, don't be feared, your son is safe!" sneered Crawshaw. "His reign is over, for good and all, and I don't mean to delay any longer than I like."

Mrs. Darnley was silent for a moment.

"You gave her the letter?" she asked, hurriedly, after a pause.

Crawshaw nodded and smiled once again.

"That was a clever thought of yours," he said, coolly. "Pon my word, you're a born conspirator!"

Mrs. Darnley's handsome face flushed; she bit her lips, and looked out of the window. Then, as if a sudden and unpleasant thought had just come, she turned to him.

"What if she should go up to town, and—"

Crawshaw strolled across to her, his hands plunged deep in his pockets.

"She can go, if she likes; she won't get no satisfaction from her journey."

"You mean?"

"I mean that by this time Mr. Henry Chaplin and his wife are well on their way to Australia at my expense, bad luck to him!"

"To such love as yours, what matters a few pounds more or less?" observed Mrs. Darnley, sneering in her turn now, and with that she stepped out on to the terrace and sailed majestically away.

Crawshaw muttered something, then lounging through the window, went off to the stables. He felt more at home there than in the house, and he could pose as a great man over the grooms, who a few weeks before would have barely considered him an equal but who now bore with his rough, brutal ways with patience and equanimity, though, perhaps, Mr. Crawshaw would have been not very well pleased—and amazed—if he had heard a few of the remarks passed on him when he had safely disappeared.

"I shall take these up to Nancy," Dorothy said, as she retraced her steps, bearing a huge bunch of exquisite grapes—a trophy of her brisk encounter with Mr. Murdock—"and then I can come down and tell you if I want you to go for Dr. Knowles, Merefield. You will wait for me here."

Where and when would not Lord Merefield have waited for his cousin? He was overwhelmed with his good fortune, and felt almost inclined to bless poor Nancy's illness, for Dorothy had rarely been so sweet to him before.

"If Aunt Anne asks for me, say that you don't know where I am," she commanded, as she moved away. "Thank Heaven," she commended with herself, "Derry returns to-night. I am always afraid of Aunt Anne when he is not here!"

She smiled to herself as she went up the broad, old-fashioned staircase, and then the smile died away as she came to Nancy's door and knocked at it softly. There was no sound from inside, and putting her hand on the knob, she turned it slowly and gently, only to find that the key must have been turned in the lock, for the door would not yield.

Her first feeling was one of alarm, her second one of pain. Nancy had never barred herself from her in this way before. Dorothy's loving heart was vaguely hurt, and altogether eyes; but to her sorrow that was not to be.

The first free moment she had from Mrs. Darnley's strangely persistent claims on her courtesy, Dorothy flew up to Nancy's room, and arrived just in time to see our poor heroine stagger, rather than walk, up the stairs, with her white, fixed face, and horror-stricken eyes.

Her dismay, as we know, was more than great; and Nancy had to curb her agony to try and soothe the golden-haired girl, who had never seemed so dear to her as now, in this, the most supreme sorrow of her young life.

But once Dorothy was gone, and the key was turned securely in the lock, Nancy had no further need of restraint, and with one broken moan she flung herself into the low chair, trying in vain to still the pain in her burning throat and temples, and to steel herself for the night and Darnley's return.

Derry! Ah, what a world of misery was written in that word!

"Thou hadst thy short sweet fill of half-blown joy."

The line rushed to her mind. Sweet, indeed, indeed it had been, and short! Born for one day, and killed the next!

Why had she ever known that he cared for her? Why had she not been left in ignorance? To have known the exquisite joy that his passionate vows, his tender kisses, had awakened, and to realize she must lose them now was an anguish immeasurable.

At one time she felt, with a wild, tumultuous throb, that the task was too great, that she could not carry the sacrifice out; then, her uncle's pale, worn face flashed to her mind, the memory of all he did for her returned to clamour in her ears; and Crawshaw's cruel black eyes shone before her, speaking only too plainly that he would give no mercy, and that on her, and her alone, the verdict rested. And then another vision would rise; a stern, handsome face, whose lips melted into a smile of tenderness, whose deep-gray orbs gazed into hers as though to search into her very heart itself. Ah! how dear that vision was—how inexpressibly dear—graven on her soul for ever! It was her lover's countenance; her hero—her ideal—hers!—no, no; he was hers no longer; she must shut out the memory of those eyes, she must wipe away the image from her heart—henceforth he was nothing to her—she belonged to another.

A shuddering sigh broke from her poor, pale lips, a wan smile played for an instant over them.

"But Dorothy loves him; I—I shall have saved her pain, whatever comes; that must be my comfort."

Then the pent-up agony broke at last—she flung out her arms with a gesture of desperation.

"Oh, Derry, Derry! My darling!—my darling! I cannot let you go; I shall die if I lose you now!"

The words sank away into a moan, and, crouching on the floor beside her bed, Nancy hid her face on the silken quilt, and wept such tears as had never come to her eyes before, even though all her early

Magdalen Islands, Que., March 27 (Special).—That suffering women in all corners of Canada are being restored to health by Dodd's Kidney Pills is shown in the press every day, and this island is not without its striking examples. Mrs. Peter C. Cormier, a well known and estimable resident, tells the following story of her cure:

"For six years I suffered with Rheumatism, Backache and Nervousness. I could not sleep nor eat, and I was always tired. My limbs were heavy and I had a dragging sensation across the loins."

"Hearing of cures by Dodd's Kidney Pills I decided to try them. Seven boxes made a new woman of me."

For a score of years Dodd's Kidney Pills have been in use in Canada. They have been tried in thousands of cases and there is not on record a single case where they have failed to cure diseased Kidneys. Thousands of Canadian men and women will tell you they owe their good health to Dodd's Kidney Pills.

WHAT A MAN WANTS.

What a man wants in a woman is somewhat as follows:

She must be a dream of beauty. She must be an angel with the smile of a seraph and a great mass of magnificent hair, all her own.

She must possess a perfect temper and never raise her voice save in song.

She must be a splendid housekeeper and not require any servants.

She must love children and be able to tend to them. She must be a fine musician and have a mind stored with all the intellectual wealth of the ages, but must never get the idea that hubby hasn't the superior intellect and doesn't know everything.

She must dress in the latest fashion, but must spend no money in so doing.

She must be interesting, elusive, gay, of a deep religious nature, lively, modest, retiring, self-sacrificing, brilliant, fascinating, but a lover of home and fireside, preferring the society of her husband to anything else on earth, but not worrying when she doesn't get any of it.

That is all that most men require.

"I don't quite see the point of that remark of yours," said the grocer, as he tied up the package of sugar. "What remark was that?" asked the customer. "You just remarked that some men had an offhand way of doing things, and you wished I was one." "Yes; I wished to remind you that your hand was on the sugar when you weighed it."

NOTHING TO IT.

"I blame my downfall on trashy literature," said the burglar.

"Gives you false ideas of life?"

"Dat's it. De hero of de dime novel always breaks jail, and I ain't never been able to break jail yet."

Mrs. Ingles, Selkirk, entered her 96 year recently. She is perhaps the only living Borderer who has often seen and spoken to Sir Walter Scott. When very young, Mrs. Ingles, whose maiden name was Elizabeth Haig, became servant to one of Sir Walter's gardeners at Abbotsford.

WASTED HOURS.

A young man, through family influence, obtained a position as confidential clerk in the office of a well-known commercial man. The first morning he got down to the office at nine o'clock, and found his master hard at work.

On the second morning he presented himself at 8.30. Again he found his chief there ahead of him, working diligently. The third day he arrived at the office at eight. There was his master already buried in business.

That night, on his way home, the young man took counsel with himself and determined to be ahead of his boss at any cost. Accordingly he set his alarm clock for 6.30, and by great exercise of will power managed to show up at the office before 7.30. There was his chief working away.

As the clerk entered the employer looked up at him with a quizzical air.

"Young man," said he, "what use do you make of your mornings?"

CANADA'S CHAMPION DANCER

Cured of Piles by Zam-Buk.

Mr. Thomas J. Hogan, Champion Clog and Pedestal Dancer of Canada, who resides at 59 Chambord St., Montreal, writes: "It gives me much pleasure to let you know my opinion of your wonderful Zam-Buk. For some time past I have been troubled with piles, but this year I suffered so much that I was obliged to cancel a number of engagements. I tried all the so-called remedies that were recommended, but they seemed to do me no good. Having been advised to try Zam-Buk I purchased a box, and after applying it a few times I felt marked relief. I continued with the Zam-Buk treatment, and the relief was extended into a permanent cure. I gladly permit you to use my experience as an illustration of the great value of Zam-Buk."

Mr. William Kenty, of Upper Nine Mile River, Hants Co., N.S., says: "I suffered terribly from piles, the pain at times being almost unbearable. Zam-Buk was recommended to me. So I procured a supply, and after a very short time Zam-Buk effected a complete cure."

Zam-Buk is also a cure for ulcers, abscesses, eczema, cold sores, chapped hands, varicose ulcers, rashes, blood-poison, ringworm, cuts, burns, bruises, children's abrasions, tetter, salt rheum, etc. All druggists and stores sell at 50c. box, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price. Zam-Buk Soap, which may be had from any druggist at 25c. per tablet, should be used instead of ordinary soap in all cases of eruptions and skin diseases and for baby's bath.

PASSED OFF LIGHTLY.

Tommy had been invited to dine at a learned professor's house, and his mother was anxious for his good behavior at the table, so she gave him elaborate instructions.

"Well, Tommy, how did you get on?" she asked on his return.

"Oh, all right, ma."

"You are quite sure you didn't do anything impolite?"

"Well, no, ma—at least, nothing to speak of."

The mother's anxiety was aroused.

"Ah! Then there was something wrong. Now, tell me all about it, Tommy."

"Oh, it wasn't much! You see, I was trying to cut my meat, and it slipped off my plate on to the floor."

"Oh, my dear boy, what did you do?"

"Oh, I just said sort of carelessly. 'That's always the way with tough meat,' and went on with my dinner!"

BRITAIN'S STRONGEST MAN

THOMAS INCH ACQUIRED A WONDERFUL PHYSIQUE.

Yorkshireman Who is the Champion Strong Man of the Old Land.

There are two types of strong men—the natural and the artificial. The first is the man who, blessed with unusual frame, constitution and muscles, becomes abnormally strong through simply following out the methodical exercises taught at any gymnasium. On the other hand, an artificially strong man is one who, without being in any way above the average in regard to physique, determines to become strong. He builds up an extraordinary constitution and develops amazing muscles by carefully studying his own requirements and following out a plan which he knows suits him, without any regard for what might be termed the regulation rules laid down by others, which are often so irksome and unsuitable as to cause more harm than good.

It is to the latter type of strong man that Mr. Thomas Inch, Britain's strongest man, belongs. And it is this fact which makes his advice as a physical culture expert so valuable.

"I am one of those," he said the other day at his school of physical culture in Fulham Road, London, "who believe that, no matter what sort of a weakling you may be, you can, by carefully studying your own particular case and requirements, develop great strength. Furthermore, I do not believe in a man making himself a martyr to any system of physical culture with the idea of becoming strong. That is to say, there are many men to-day whose lives are a misery to themselves and to others for the simple reason that they are obsessed with the notion that if they are to become strong they must not do this and

THEY MUST NOT DO THAT.

They must go to bed at one particular time and they must get up at one particular time. They must not walk, run or jump except at special hours. In a word, they must make themselves entirely subservient to the idea of becoming strong.

"I say to my pupils, if you find beer suits you, drink it. If you find yourself energetic on a vegetarian diet, stick to it; and if you prefer a beef steak to nut cutlets, by all means have it. But, be moderate; and when you find a thing does not suit you, look around for something else to take its place. It is so simple as A B C, this question of getting strong. Think for yourself and study yourself in regard to diet, then go in for a little exercise every day.

"I really believe that my system of physical culture has proved so successful and beneficial to hundreds of pupils because I do not ask them to do two or three hours a day. I cut the time down to minutes, but the exercises must be done properly and regularly. It is no good picking up a developer or a pair of dumb-bells for a couple of minutes before you get into bed and just working your arms like a pump-handle. Do the exercises

And it was during lunch at his delightful residence that Mr. Inch told some amusing stories of how he has surprised visitors by eating, drinking, and smoking like one of themselves. "Sometimes," he said, "friends come to stay with me for the week-end, and they cannot understand why I am still able to hold my title of champion strong man without Spartan training. But, as I have explained, it is simply a question of understanding yourself, taking things easily, and living moderately."

MAN, THE MASTER.

Some of the Nature Giants Than Man Has Conquered.

Many centuries ago man's achievements were limited by the strength of his body, because he did not know how to make the forces of Nature work for him. He knew that these forces existed. The wind, the rain, the lightning, all seemed to him the acts of great giants of the earth and sky—or even strange, powerful gods whom he worshipped through fear. When the wind wafted his bark safely to port, or the rain gave abundant crops, he was grateful to these great giants for their aid; but when his ship was wrecked or his crops failed for lack of rain, he sought to appease their anger with sacrifices upon his rude altar.

Agas passed before man learned that these forces were as willing to work for him as against him, if he only could learn the secrets of control.

The history of the world is largely the story of how man has obeyed increasing mastery over these Nature giants and used their powers in the tasks of progress.

Wind is the first Nature giant that man tamed to his use. Probably, from seeing a tree swayed by this mighty power, man came, at last, to reason that if the tree was aboard a boat, the boat would move in the direction of the wind; so he made a mast from a tree-trunk, and rigged up some rude sail from skins of animals, to take the place of leaves, and found that he could go much faster and farther than with his paddle adone. Gradually, then, he learned also, by means of tacking, to sail in any desired direction, no matter which way the wind blew. Thus he had discovered the principle used by every sailing vessel since. Later, he devised the windmill for grinding grain and drawing water.

A balloonist, by going higher or lower, can otherwise find a current of air that will take him in almost any direction; and men have travelled thousands of miles by this means. The kite also makes use of the wind power and has suggested the aeroplane which man has now made possible through later discoveries. The vacuum cleaner is another way in which the power of air in motion is used.

As yet, man cannot perfectly control the wind giant, for cyclones sometimes do great damage on land and sea; but even this occasional danger may yet be subdued.

LORD KITCHENER'S TASK.

BIGGEST OF JEWEL HOWS TO REMOVE VARIOUS STAINS

A BLAZE OF GEMS TO MARK THE DURBAR OF DELHI.

Kohinoor and Other Famous Diamonds and Pearls to be There.

The keepers of the British crown jewels are making preparations for their safe transport from London to Delhi in readiness for the great durbar at which King George will crown himself Emperor of India, writes a London correspondent. Those who attend this durbar will have a chance to see such a display of precious stones as the eye of no living man has ever gazed on.

The British crown jewels, fine as they are, cannot, with the exception of a few individual gems, compare with some of the great Indian collections. The princes, rajahs and maharajahs of India have the accumulated wealth of generations invested in countless dazzling gems, whose value is incalculable. But if every Indian rajah had as great and as valuable collection as the aggregate of all their collections even then, in the eyes of India, the British crown jewels would surpass them all. And this, for the sake of one stone, the Kohinoor.

Compared with either of the Stars of Africa, as the Cullinan diamonds are now called, the Kohinoor is but a splendid pebble. Its history is what appeals to the Indian mind. Long years ago it was the chief jewel of the Mogul emperors and remains to this day the symbol of imperial authority in India.

The history of the Kohinoor is fairly well known, but there are periods around which a halo of mystery still hangs. It was brought to England after the Sikh wars, and at once met with a strange if somewhat

UNROMANTIC ADVENTURE.

The official who brought it over sent it to the wash in his waistcoat pocket. At that time its weight was 186 carats, which was subsequently reduced to 106 by the recutting ordered by the Prince Consort.

When it belonged to the great Moguls the Kohinoor was a far greater stone. The French jeweller Tavernier, who saw it in the seventeenth century, described it as 787 1-2 carats in weight, uncut, or merely "flatted" on one side. He compared it to an egg cut in half. Hortensio Borgia, a dishonest or unskillful Italian diamond cutter, was then called in and reduced it to 288 carats. He nearly lost his head when the Emperor saw what he had done to his favorite gem.

Many experts consider that the Orlo diamond of the Russian regalia, 193 carats in weight, and also a large fragment of 132 carats, may have both been cut from the remains of the Mogul diamond. But the Kohinoor, which Ranjit Singh used sometimes to wear in the socket of his blind eye, continued to represent the original gem, and when it is seen in the crown of George V, at Delhi next December, for every native present it will be the symbol of imperial authority.

Historically the return of the Kohinoor to India will in native eyes set the final seal upon the great ceremony at Delhi.

ENGLISH WAYS OF TAKING OUT SPOTS.

Many Useful Hints on How to Eradicate Stains on Clothing and Wool.

Fruit stains should be treated at once, says an English writer in the Queen, for if allowed to set they are difficult to remove. Rub the stain with soft soap or good yellow soap, well wetted, then cover it with a paste of salt and water. Or rub the stain well on both sides with a good yellow soap, and then tie over it a little pearl ash, and let it all soak in hot water, boiling it if necessary; rinse well and dry in the open air.

If the stain is very persistent try the following: Crush four ounces of chrolide of lime in a basin and work it to a smooth paste with a little cold water; when perfectly mixed, add to this from one and a half to one and three-quarter pints more cold water, using in all two pints of water; now stir the lime well, cover closely, and let it stand for a day or two, stirring it occasionally. Now leave it still quite settled, when you skim it, pour off the clear liquid, straining it into a bottle, and

KEEP TIGHTLY STOPPERED.

To remove the stains rub the spot with a rag dipped in the mixture, rinsing it at once after the spot is removed in clean cold or tepid water. Should the article be badly stained soak it in cold water to which you have added sufficient of the mixture to make the water smell slightly of lime; watch this, and directly the stains are removed lift out the linen, rinse well, and dry in the open air in the sun if possible. Care must be taken with this, for if the linen be left in too long the bleach will rot it. This remedy will remove almost any stains.

If the fingers are stained from walnuts dip them in strong tea, rubbing the nails well with it with a nail brush, and wash the hands at once in warm water and the stains will at once disappear.

If grass stains on cotton are rubbed with pure alcohol they will disappear, but this should be done at once. For claret stains soak the cloth at once in skim milk two or three times and

WASH IN COLD WATER.

To make balls for removing grease stains mix well 1½ ounces of powdered French chalk and 5 ounces of powdered pipeclay, then work them to a paste with 2 ounces of spirits of wine, shape this paste into balls and leave them to dry. To use, moisten the grease stains well with warm water, then rub them thoroughly with the ball; now let dry, if possible in the sun; then brush well and sponge with a little water if any stain be left.

To clean discolored hearths mix whitening to a thin paste with skim milk, adding a drop or two of liquid blue or a morsel of stone blue. Put it on the hearthstone with a paint brush. This does not crack off.

White stains on polished wood caused by upsetting any spirit or by overhot dishes or plates may be dreds of pupils because I do not ask them to do two or three hours a day. I cut the time down to minutes, but the exercises must be done properly and regularly. It is no good picking up a developer or a pair of dumb-bells for a couple of minutes before you get into bed and just working your arms like a pump-handle. Do the exercises properly, and when the muscles begin to feel tired, stop. I do not believe in elaborate exercises or in elaborate apparatus. With iron dumb-bells and a chest expander one can bring about wonderful muscular development."

Mr. Inch has proved this in his own case, for he is able to put on muscle at will. His measurements are SIMPLY AMAZING.

When training for the title of champion strong man of Britain a short time ago he lifted 260 pounds, over 2 1-cwt., with one hand, and nearly 2 3-4 cwt. with two hands overhead; his chest, expanded, measured 53 1-2 inches, biceps 19 7-8 inches, forearm 15 inches, thigh 27 1-2 inches, and calf 15 inches. And although he is now 28 years of age, Mr. Inch does not consider he is at his best. In his opinion he will eclipse all previous records when he is nearer 35, and considers that it is quite possible for him to develop a 60-inch chest and a 21-in. arm.

Mr. Inch commenced physical culture at the age of eight, and he recalls with some amusement how he used to dig holes in the ground with the sole idea of developing muscle, stopping every now and then to take his measurements to see if his development has proceeding apace. "If I remember rightly," he says, "my bicep measurement was then 8 1-2 inches. An end was put to this, my first attempt at physical culture, by someone falling into a deep hole, which put a stop to further digging." As a boy, however, Mr. Inch had an ambition to become a strong man, and it is characteristic of the determination which he displays at all times when he wishes to accomplish something, that he was never tired of studying his weak points and endeavoring to remedy them according to his own ideas. No one can say he has not been successful, and to-day he can boast of thousands of pupils in all parts of the world who are following his plan and advice and gaining health and strength.

A keen level-headed Yorkshireman, Mr. Inch has built up as a physical culture expert. He employs scores of clerks, and as we bowled along in his 45 horse-power automobile, with Mr. Inch at the wheel, to his private residence in Richmond, he told me that he makes it a point of honor to deal with the case of each pupil personally.

AN AMAZING BUSINESS

"Tremendous work. Yes," he continued.

"It means sitting at my desk from early morning till late at night, but I never felt in better condition in my life. As a matter of fact, I have accepted a weight-lifting challenge for next month for a wager of $1,000 and I think I shall win. You see, the amount of work a man can get through depends entirely upon his physical condition. If you have got the strength you can stick at it day after day without any loss of energy. I just do a few minutes' exercise every day, perhaps a little cycling, and that is all I find necessary to keep fit."

LORD KITCHENER'S TASK.

Will Command 45,000 Soldiers and 5,000 Sailors at the Coronation.

Lord Kitchener, who will return to England from British East Africa to command the coronation troops, will find himself faced with a severe but congenial task in generalship and rapid mobilization, for an army of 45,000 soldiers, with probably some 5,000 sailors, will be in possession of London. The War Office is actively preparing for this great invasion of London from the military depots and garrison towns throughout the country. It is expected that the majority of the regiments will be billeted in the parks at any of the Council schools and in several big buildings like the Agricultural Hall. Accommodation in the Metropolitan barracks is utterly inadequate, and not more than 10,000 or 12,000 men will be able to find room at Chelsea, Wellington, Knightsbridge and the Tower.

A week before the coronation an army of Sappers will start trenching the soil in Kensington Gardens. Tents will be erected in the leafy avenues, and field kitchens placed in the vicinity of the Round Pond. Nearly 10,000 men will camp in the gardens. The official list of metropolitan depots is not quite prepared, but it is expected to include Battersea Park, Regent's Park, a small portion of Hyde Park, Bishop's Park, Fulham and Hampton Court. London, in the hands of this large army—the largest perhaps ever mobilized within its borders—will be one of the instructive features of the coronation. Camp fires will burn in the parks at night, and the ordinary law-abiding citizen, who probably has never seen a handful of soldiers bivouacking in open country, will find a very picturesque imitation of it in the leafy areas in town. This army will include representatives of every State and Dominion in the Empire. Several distinguished transport officers are to be chosen for duty on a special military railroad staff, which will supervise the detrainment of the troops. These will be brought in to Waterloo and other stations on the morning of coronation day.

HIGH PRICE FOR FLATS.

Big Sums Paid for Houses During the Coronation.

To British peers who own London town houses the coronation this year means a small fortune, for the demand for such houses has grown exceedingly brisk of late. The bidders are nearly all multi-millionaires, some of whom have already secured flats in fashionable apartment houses but want to add to their name the glory of inhabiting the residence of a member of the nobility, probably not without the silent hope that their grateful landlord will get them a chance to put foot inside the walls of Buckingham Palace. One Liberal peer has refused an offer of $50,000 for the use of his residence for six weeks. Another man has offered $85,000 for the tenancy of a house in Hill street during May, June and July, but the owner refuses to take less than $100,000.

The private residence of the Prime Minister, always greatly coveted by reason of its splendid reception rooms, old mahogany staircase, and walls painted by Sir John Thornhill, two centuries ago, has been secured by Lady Cunard.

to represent the original gem, and when it is seen in the crown of George V, at Delhi next December, for every native present it will be the symbol of imperial authority.

Historically the return of the Kohinoor to India will in native eyes set the final seal upon the great ceremony at Delhi.

But some of the other gems in the British regalia will certainly produce their effect upon a people so accustomed to symbolism. There is the great won in the battle from which it takes its name before the great Moguls introduced splendor of life into the imperial palaces they built so lavishly. It will certainly be watched with keen interest by Rajput eyes as it glows from the central cross of the English crown.

Then there is the pale sapphire in the topmost cross of the orb. That will surely make its appeal, for it came from the Confessor's tomb in Westminster Abbey and has a nine-hundred-year-old record behind it. And beyond all question, the new, unhistoried Stars of Africa will have their triumph. In a way they will bring home to the native of India the majesty of the occasion better than proclamations, processions, gaol deliveries or the sound of guns. The two gigantic South African stones will have begun their careers of symbolism when they blaze out unrivalled and unchallenged over what will probably be the most stupendous assemblages of gems that Europe or Asia has ever seen.

None can estimate the huge wealth that lies hidden in Indian treasures in the form of jewels. At the 1903 durbar the blaze of jewels surprised even the Indian princes themselves.

The Nizam of Hyderabad wore the Nizam of 277 carats and the Victoria of 180 carats. The Gaekwar of Baroda had his Star of the South, a Brazilian crystal of the first water.

WEIGHING 125 CARATS.

In the rough it weighed 254. He also had the famous Akbar Shah and the Eugenie; the last, as its name implies, was once owned by the empress of the French.

The Maharajah of Patiala had the famous Sancy diamond which at various times has been owned by Charles the Bold, Duke of Normandy; Emanuel, King of Portugal; Nicholas de Marlay, Sieur de Sancy, James II. of England, who fled with it and other jewels in 1688; Louis XIV., Louis XV., Napoleon, Napoleon's brother Joseph, King of Spain, and Prince Demidoff.

But these famous and named stones are only a small part of and are often actually smaller than countless others in the uncatalogued treasures of the Indian princes. No mention of pearls has been made yet, but the Prince of Gwalior wears, besides a necklace of thirteen rows of perfectly matched pearls as large as filberts, a curious sash of crimson velvet depending from his left shoulder to his right knee, the material of which is hidden by similar stones. But the Maharajah of Travancore can outdo the Prince of Gwalior in pearls.

"Well, here I am," announced the fashionable physician in his breezy way. "And now what do you think is the matter with you?" "Doctor, I hardly know," murmured the fashionable patient. "What is new?"

water if any stain be left.

To clean discolored hearths mix whitening to a thin paste with skim milk, adding a drop or two of liquid blue or a morsel of stone blue. Put it on the hearthstone with a paint brush. This does not crack off.

White stains on polished wood caused by upsetting any spirit or by overhot dishes or plates may be removed by applying to these spots a feather dipped in spirits of camphor. This must be used very sparingly and the furniture rubbed well at once with a cloth dipped in sweet oil, repeating the process if necessary. When the stain is completely removed polish well with beeswax and turpentine or any

GOOD FURNITURE POLISH.

To clean ivory rub the stains with lemon juice, then with whitening made into soft paste with lemon juice; allow this to dry on, and when perfectly dry wipe off with a soft cloth.

For mildew stains first brush off any loose mildew, then well rub in a little common salt, sprinkling it with powdered French chalk and thoroughly moistening it with cold water; after this dry slowly in the open air and then rinse well. This may require to be repeated. Mildew on leather may be removed by rubbing the place well with a clean, dry and very soft cloth to remove any fungus that may be on the surface of the leather, then rub over with a rag just moistened with pyroligneous acid.

FIGHTING CANCER.

A Cure for the Disease is Still Far Away.

A Parliamentary paper has been issued containing the report of Dr. Bashford, who represented the British Government at the second international conference for cancer research held at Paris in October last. Dr. Bashford apparently does not see that much advancement has been made, if any at all, in fighting the disease itself, but he says reviewed as a whole the conference must be pronounced to have been of some value. This, it would seem, consists chiefly in the working arrangements and the selection of subject for discussion and experiment.

Dr. Bashford, in his report, says: "The knowledge of cancer is still so vague and so ambiguous as to have prevented any unanimity or even a basis for discussion from being obtained in many points. In particular the delegates were divided upon such fundamental matters as the etiology of cancer and on what is and what is not the legitimate application of statistical methods to the investigation of the frequency of cancer. While some delegates of high standing advocated the theory that cancer is of parasitic or infectious nature, others of equal authority in the medical world held tenaciously to the contrary view."

Dr. Bashford concludes that so long as there is so much divergence of expert opinion due to the continued ignorance which prevails it is obviously hopeless to attempt to devise rational measures and as equally futile to promote an international crusade, for the prevention or reduction against ravages of cancer along the lines which are meeting with world-wide acceptance in the cases of the wars which are being waged against tuberculosis and leprosy.

CHINESE GEM CUTTERS.

Carved Crystal Like Ice That Has Been Dipped in Hot Water.

There is a great decorative value in rock crystal in its purest form, the perfect Tama, as the Japanese call the sphere. It is the purest of all materials that the artist can work with, says a writer in Handicraft, and many charming effects can be obtained by carving, cutting and slightly tinting or foiling.

Have you ever seen a great icicle all the harsh edges of which have been melted off in the sun or a fragment of ice which has been dipped in hot water for a moment? If so you have seen the effect which the Chinese love to produce on their carved rock crystals.

The crystal itself has the purity of the most perfect ice, but when an object is completed by the lapidary he removes all the harsh lines and produces this beautiful water dipped effect by rounding off the edges and polishing.

In mounting a bit of jade, red tourmaline or amber the Chinese will sometimes put upon the setting or fill in the interstices of the metal with a greenish shimmer; and it is difficult to make out at first glance what it is; perhaps a metal or a mineral. The magnifying glass shows that it is the blue feather of the kingfisher and as it is placed in a setting with a ridge above it for protection it frequently will stand a good deal of wear.

Chinese lapidary art generally consists in ignoring everything that is geometrical. The motives of the Chinese are generally plants, animals, scenes or symbolical ornaments. Everything in their lapidary art is soft and rounded, pleasing both to the eye and to the touch.

Abbott Thayer, the American artist, has discovered that the most intense colors properly mingled, as in the wings of birds, butterflies and beetles, blend into a soft tone. Roty draws only the ideal out of even an iron furnace or a smoke-stack. Louis Tiffany has always believed in a wealth of softness and color, whether in glass or jewelry. To obtain a brilliant blue he took colorless opals and ground them into regular jelly-like masses and put blue sapphires under them, and then opals under masses of pale sapphires.

Again, he combined amethysts that were deep purple with deep blue sapphires and combined these with opal matrix of deepest blue and green. Another example is a lamp screen of beach pebbles leaded together; every one of these pebbles had been water-worn and slightly iron-rusted, and the blending of the white with the tones of brown in the lamplight produced a most charming effect.

MUST WEAR DARK CLOTHES.

A Requirement in Factories Where Work is Done With Gold.

Light suits of clothes are not favored in factories where work is done on gold. In fact, in many such factories a dark suit of clothes is absolutely required and even a light waistcoat may lose a man a job. The reason for this is that any stray grains of gold that may get on the clothing can easily be caught on a dark suit, while they

HOW MOUNTAINS DEAL DEATH

WHY ETNA IN PARTICULAR IS SO MUCH FEARED.

In 1169 It Destroyed the City of Catania, Killing 15,000 People.

Etna, the "burning mountain," is the mightiest volcano in Europe. It is 10,800 feet high. If you wished to walk round its base you would have to walk ninety miles. It slopes steadily on all sides up to the biggest crater, which is nearly a mile broad.

Though volcanoes are often spoken of as burning mountains, they do not burn at all. Nor, in the proper sense of the word, are they mountains at all. A volcano is really a flaw in the crust of the earth through which the fierce glowing heat that lies below the crust has managed to burst a hole. Through this hole great floods of melted rock spout up. Some volcanoes work at intervals, some are in eruption all the time. As the melted rock jets up into the air and falls it naturally builds itself into a mountain round the hole. The next eruption has to burst its way through the heart of that mountain. The chimney it spouts through is usually called "the pipe."

Sometimes an eruption is so fierce that when the lava (another name for melted rock) spouts out it is burst into bits. When it falls it is sometimes as fine as dust, sometimes the size of cinders. Most volcanoes, indeed, are simply

GIGANTIC CINDER-HEAPS.

When the force is not so great the lava in the pipe simply bubbles over and flows down the sides of the mountain exactly as porridge boils over the edge of a pot. As lava is liquid, the slope of a lava volcano (or lava cone, as it is usually called) is always very gentle. Falling cinders, on the other hand, pile themselves up quite steeply. A lava cone, then, is always less steep than a cinder cone. Often a cinder cone is as steep as the roof of a house.

And a volcano never burns. What looks like flame is only the glow of the white-hot lava on the clouds of steam. The more steam there is forcing its way up the pipe the more the lava bubbles, just as in the case of the porridge. If the pressure of steam is very great, then you have the lava blown to bits and falling as cinders, while the mighty clouds of steam rise high above the mountain. It is this steam that is mistaken for smoke.

Sometimes a cone sends out lava and cinders alternately, so that you have a great mountain of cinders bound together by layers and walls of lava.

These walls of lava are due to the fact that sometimes more lava wants to come up the pipe than the pipe will hold, so the lava bursts its way out through weak spots in the sides of the mountain. Etna has no fewer than 700 of these cones on its slopes. One of them, Monte Rossi, is a hill in itself,

PHENOMENAL TRAVELLING.

A Yankee Took Down an Englishman a Peg or Two.

An Englishman was bragging of the speed on English railways to a Yankee traveller seated at his side in one of the carriages of a "fast train" in England. The engine-bell was rung in the guard's van as the train neared a station. It suggested to the Yankee an opportunity of taking down his companion a peg or two.

"What's the noise?" innocently inquired the Yankee.

"We are approaching a town," said the Englishman. "They have to commence ringing about ten miles before they get to a station, or else the train would run by it before the bell could be heard! Wonderful, isn't it? I suppose they haven't invented bells in America yet!"

"Why yes," replied the Yankee; "we've got bells, but can't use them on our railroads. We run so 'tarnal fast that the train always keeps ahead of the sound. No use whatever; the sound never reaches the village till after the train gets by."

"Indeed!" exclaimed the Englishman.

"Fact," said the Yankee; "had to give up bells. Then we tried steam-whistles, but they wouldn't answer either. I was on a locomotive when the whistle was tried. We were going at a tremendous rate—hurricanes were nowhere, and I had to hold my hair on. We saw a two-horse wagon crossing the track about five miles ahead, and the engineer let the whistle on, screeching like a trooper. It screamed awfully, but it wasn't no use. The next thing I knew I was picking myself out of a pond by the roadside, amid the fragments of the locomotive, dead horses, broken wagon, and dead engineer lying beside me. Just then the whistle came along, mixed up with some frightful oaths that I had heard the engineer use when he first saw the horses! Poor fellow! he was dead before his voice got to him."

"After that we tried lights, supposing these would travel faster than sound. We got some so powerful that the chickens woke up all along the road when we came by, supposing it to be morning. But the locomotive kept ahead of it still, and was in the darkness, with the lights close on behind it. The inhabitants were against it; they couldn't sleep with so much light in the night-time. Finally, we had to station electric telegraphs along the road, with signalmen to telegraph when the train was in sight, and I have heard that some of the fast trains beat the lightning fifteen minutes every forty miles. But I can't say as that is true; the rest I know to be so."

CATS RETRIEVING INSTINCT.

Males More Amenable to Discipline Than Females.

One of the most regrettable pranks of my boyhood was cat-pulping sparrows, and a tortoise shell kitten, progeny of the despised stable cat, learned of its own accord to fetch the dead birds and bring them to my feet. Certainly this example of cat retrieving was exceptional, but the faculty was so strongly developed as to become

PRESERVING WILD ANIMALS

NATIONS SET ASIDE WHOLE TRACTS OF COUNTRY.

National Parks Have Been Turned Into Sanctuaries for Rare Animals.

Every day the world is getting more settled, and, as civilised man gradually conquers the wild places, the more dangerous animals are pushed back into an ever-decreasing area of country, or even exterminated altogether.

The continual improvement in the sporting rifle makes hunting more easy, and the increase of railways brings the big game hunter into closer touch with the wilderness, so that it is not surprising that whole races of wild animals are slowly but surely being exterminated.

So serious has this question of extermination become that almost every nation of importance is taking the matter up and setting aside whole tracts of country, in which game of all kinds is strictly preserved and only a few shooting licenses issued in order to prevent too great an increase of the protected species.

SWITZERLAND IN LINE.

Switzerland is the latest country to come into line, for it has just announced that a large tract of country at Ternetz in the Lower Engadine has been set aside for the preservation of the national flora and fauna which are greatly in need of protection.

The country forms a large square of territory on the Swiss Tyrolean and Italian frontiers, which contains only one hamlet and consists largely of primitive forests and thickly-wooded valleys traversed only by a few bridle paths chiefly known to smugglers.

The United States was the first country to set aside a reservation, when, in 1872, the Yellowstone Park, situated in Wyoming, Idaho, and Montana, was reserved from settlement in order that it might form a huge national park in which the national wild animals could breed unmolested. It comprises some 3,348 square miles of land, which contain ranges of mountains, lakes, rivers, waterfalls, geysers, and much natural beauty. Its most celebrated feature, perhaps, is the famous Grand Canon, and a geyser which throws thick mud instead of water.

A few buffaloes still roam its least visited portions, but the mountain lions have almost died out. Elk, deer, antelope, bear, mountain sheep, moose, and smaller animals are very plentiful, but the park guards shoot a large number of coyotes, as they prey on other animals. Birds breed in huge quantities, and steps are being taken to encourage one of the smaller and more rare birds by placing nesting boxes in suitable places.

Canada possesses a couple of National Parks, a comparatively small one about 120 miles from Ottawa, and a much larger one in British Columbia. The former, the Algonquin National Park, is situated between Georgian Bay and the Ottawa River, and is more than forty miles square, most of which consists of small rivers and lakes. It is chiefly intended to be a home for beavers and wild-fowl, although of course a considerable ored in factories where work is done on gold. In fact, in many such factories a dark suit of clothes is absolutely required and even a light waistcoat may lose a man a job. The reason for this is that any stray grains of gold that may get on the clothing can easily be caught on a dark suit, while they might get away from the establishment if light clothes were worn.

That such a rule was enforced among gold workers one man learned recently when a Bohemian gold beater applied to him for a helping hand. The Bohemian said that he had only recently come to this country, that he had had a chance to obtain a good job at his trade but that the place had been refused him because he turned up with a light coat and waistcoat on, and they were the only clothes he had.

The man whom he approached was struck with the story and offered to help him out if it proved true. He went to a downtown factory with him and found out that the man could have the job if he presented himself within an hour with the proper clothes on. Two dollars enabled the man to rig himself out in the dark coat and waistcoat to go with his dark trousers, and sure enough he got the job.

"You may think this strange," said the man at the factory, "but it means quite a little to us. Every man's clothing is carefully examined when he leaves here at night and the gold brushed off whenever we see any on his clothing."

"It is impossible to hide even tiny grains on a dark background, but take a mixed lot of a light suit and we might easily lose quite an amount of gold, and gold isn't anything you want to lose even in small quantities."

NURSING THE NEW CRAZE.

Fashionable Society at London Has Taken it Up.

The fashionable craze of the hour in London, England, is nursing. A good deal is being made of the fact that "Nurse Grimston," who has entered a training home at Bow in the East-end of London, happens to be the Earl of Verulam's daughter. As a matter of fact, the peerage has supplied a good many recruits to the profession of nursing in the last few years.

Lady Escher's first aid classes have given an impetus to the movement, while the practical interest in nursing institutions which Queen Alexandra has repeatedly shown is also largely responsible for the hold which the vocation has taken on the minds of women who are prominent socially. One of the best known society nurses is Lady Anesley, who became deeply interested in hospital work and spent much of her time in the wards of the City of Dublin hospitals. But for her marriage she would have adopted nursing as a profession, and in the end she founded a village hospital in the grounds of her home in County Down.

Lady Hermonie Blackwood, a marquis' daughter, and sister of Lord Dufferin, is president of the Irish Nursing Association, and among earls' daughters who have been to the fore in the nursing movement are Lady Katherine Stanhope, Lady Rosalind Northcote, Lady Griselda Cheape, and Lady Maud Keith-Falconer.

its way out through weak spots in the sides of the mountain. Etna has no fewer than 700 of these cones on its slopes. One of them, Monte Rossi, is a hill in itself.

BEING 450 FEET HIGH.

Indeed, a model of Etna looks as if it were covered with pimples.

When Etna is really roused it is far more dangerous than Vesuvius. In 1169 it nearly destroyed the city of Catani, killing 15,000 people. In 1669 it found its pipe so inconveniently small that it had to crack one of its sides. This crack was no less than twelve miles long. At the bottom, white-hot lava could dimly be seen through the clouds of steam. In 1755 millions of gallons of boiling water were shot out of the Val del Bove, which is a great circular pit on the slope of the mountain, four or five miles in diameter, its sides being cliffs nearly a mile high in places.

The greatest volcanic eruption ever known took place in the East Indies in 1883. The story makes almost incredible reading. The volcanic island of Krakatoa commenced proceedings by blowing half of itself into thin air. From the opening no less than a cubic mile of rock was shot out.

A column of steam and lava dust rose into the air to a height six times as great as that of Mount Everest. It spread and spread till for hundreds of miles round the air was black as midnight. Sounds as of distant cannonading were heard 2,000 miles off.

Sea waves fifty feet high killed 35,000 people and were felt as far off as California. Instead of an island half a mile high there was not a hole a quarter of a mile deep. The shock of the eruption sent air-waves three and a half times round the earth. The fine dust in the upper atmosphere added for months afterwards a strange glow to the sunsets in England, and did not vanish completely for three years.

THE CAUSE OF ERUPTIONS

is not known for certain. A popular theory is that they are caused by water getting in to the white-hot mass which is supposed to lie under the outer crust of the earth. And it is certainly a fact that practically all volcanoes are close to the edge of the sea.

Some lava flows slowly, some quickly. Vesuvius in 1805 sent out a lava stream that in four minutes had reached a spot four miles off. The size of a lava stream is sometimes gigantic. In 1783 Skaptar Jokull in Iceland emitted two streams at one time. One was forty miles long by seven miles broad, the other fifty miles by fifteen. The average depth of both was about a hundred feet.

Lava cools very, very slowly, except on the surface, which cools at once. It is an extremely bad conductor of heat. Twenty years after a stream of lava was sent out from Jorullo in Mexico tourists could light their cigars through chinks in the surface, and the surface had been cold for twenty years! In 1828 a layer of snow many feet thick was found under a layer of Vesuvian lava. It was still unmelted, and is probably there still.

Lava dust has the same property. Shepherds on the higher slopes of Etna cover some snow in winter with a thin layer of dust and cinders, so that in the hot, dry summer they may have water for their flocks.—Pearson's Weekly.

pranks of my boyhood was catapulting sparrows, and a tortoise shell kitten, progeny of the despised stable cat, learned of its own accord to fetch the dead birds and bring them to my feet. Certainly this example of cat retrieving was exceptional, but the faculty was so strongly developed as to become transmissible, the tortoise shell's kittens in turn becoming expert retrievers with very little teaching, says the Edinburgh Scotsman.

A cat's intelligence is very little behind that of a dog, and I could cite instances when the members of a kitten family have learned tricks more quickly than the members of a puppy one. I do not wish to disparage the sex, but I have found in teaching young cats to retrieve and do tricks that the males are much more amenable to discipline and quicker at "lessons" than the females are, and of a troupe of performing cats which went the round of the music halls some years ago every member was a male.

Taking cats generally, the highest intelligence is met with in Manx and foreign short hair breeds, although our native cats might be just as clever if they were given the same opportunities. Persians, on the other hand, are peculiarly stupid. Unlike a dog, a cat has not a forgiving disposition; it is at all times more independent, and consequently more patience is required in its training, and it must never be cuffed.

When I owned a well known "cattery" of foreign shorthairs the inmates would answer to my whistle just as dogs do, and they each had names and would respond individually to them. The tricks they could do were legion, but the one I looked on as my greatest triumph was the rounding up of chickens as a dog rounds up sheep, which one, and only one, learned to do. Another would do "penance" by going down on its knees, and putting the front of its head on the ground, and remaining there until told to rise.

TROUSERS FOR WOMEN.

One Place in Europe Where They Are the Fashion.

There is at least one place in Europe where trousers for women are the fashion, and they are real trousers, too, made of good wearing material, not the modern jupe-culotte, with its veillings of choice cloths.

The women of Champéry, the well known health resort in Switzerland, have from time immemorial worn honest masculine trousers. They wear them not to attract attention to themselves, but simply for the sake of convenience, for they have to perform tasks which need freedom of the nether limbs.

They not only perform all a woman's usual tasks, including the bringing up of very large families, but to a great extent the care of the cattle is left to them. In Summer they labor in the fields and in Winter they toil about the steep hillsides through deep snow, often on skis, feeding and looking after the stabled cows and goats. Sometimes they carry huge wicker baskets on their backs filled with all manner of articles from faggots to babies. The weight of these baskets would tax the strength of a strong man unaccustomed to them.

The Champéry women in spite of all their hard work are handsome. They are tall and well set up, with masses of dark and often curly hair, dark eyes and bright complexions.

tawa, and a much larger one in British Columbia. The former, the Algonquin National Park, is situated between Georgian Bay and the Ottawa River, and is more than forty miles square, most of which consists of small rivers and lakes. It is chiefly intended to be a home for beavers and wild-fowl, although, of course, a considerable number of the larger animals are also to be found.

RESERVATIONS FOR BISON.

Then in Lake Superior, four miles from Mungasing, Michigan, is Grand Island, containing 13,800 acres of woodland, which are devoted to the preservation of the local animal and bird life. There are also one or two smaller reservations in the United States, especially set aside for the preservation of the few herds of bison that still remain; one is at Wichita, Oklahoma, and another at Flathead, Montana, but their areas are small.

Germany is also moving, and there is a talk of her establishing a reserve in her East African territories to the south-east of Lake Victoria Nyanza, which will comprise no fewer than 30,000 square miles, a stretch of country nearly as large as Ireland. Within its borders the hunting of game is to be strictly prohibited, but it is doubtful if so much territory will be set aside, as it would cost an enormous sum to guard it efficiently.

The Transvaal Government has proclaimed a sanctuary for wild animals. This is the Sabi Game Reserve, which runs for 200 miles along the Portuguese border. It extends from the Komati to the Limpopo rivers, and is about forty miles broad. The warden has under him four white and seventy black assistants, and the more rare animals which were being exterminated are now increasing in number. Only a few lions, leopards, hyena, and wild dogs are shot by the wardens, as if these increased to any extent it would be bad for the more peaceful creatures.

South Australia recently set aside sixty-seven square miles of land at the west end of Kangaroo Island, and, according to a larger scheme, some 300 square miles will also be used for the purpose. Round Mount Kosciusko, in the Australian Alps, near the border of Victoria, one hundred square miles has been made a game reserve by the Government of New South Wales; while New Zealand has also reservations.

ONE EVEN NEAR LONDON.

For the last few years Count Potocki has turned some 22,000 acres of his estate at Pilaivin, in Poland, into a game preserve. He surrounded it with a wooden palisade some eight feet high, and within it he introduced specimens of the European bison and native animals, besides some wapiti from Canada, and other foreign creatures.

Even close to London a small wood has been set aside in the Brent valley, where wild birds and small animals can breed without interference, and it is hoped that other and larger sanctuaries will be formed in different parts of the country.—Pearson's Weekly.

"Oh, Johnnie, Johnnie," said his aunt, reproachfully, "why is it you never remember to say 'Thank you'?" "I expect it's 'cause I don't get things given to me often enough for practice," answered the young diplomat, hopefully eyeing a box of chocolates.

"I am all right now,
thanks to Dr. Miles'
Heart Remedy."

The same relief is ready for you. Are you sure you do not need it? If Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy helped Charles Holmes, why won't it help you?

"I was troubled with heart disease, and after reading about Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy, I got a bottle. Before I got the Heart Remedy I had to sit up most of the night, and felt very bad at my stomach. Whatever I would eat made me feel worse, and my heart beat very fast. But thanks to Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy, I am all right now. I eat good, sleep good, and feel like a new man, although I am almost 68 years old. I have been a soldier in the late war of the rebellion, and was badly wounded." CHARLES HOLMES, Private Co. MILES MEDICAL CO., Toronto, Can.

Died From Terror.

Perhaps the most remarkable death from fear was that of the Dutch painter, who lived in the seventeenth century. One day he went into a room full of anatomical subjects to sketch some death's heads and skeletons for a picture he intended to paint. The weather was very sultry, and while sketching he fell asleep. He was aroused by bones dancing around him and the skeletons suspended from the ceiling clashing together. In a fit of terror he threw himself from a window, and, though he sustained no serious injury and was informed that a slight earthquake had caused the commotion among his ghostly surroundings, he died in a few days in a nervous tremor.

The Soft Answer.

"Do you know you are fishing in forbidden water?" roared a voice from the bridge.

"No," said the fisherman on the bank quietly, regardless of yet another angling he that was placed to his credit.

"It is preserved water," went on his new found friend, "and is cost me a lot of money to stock it with fish."

"Ah, what fish?" asked the angler, intent upon rod and line.

"Roach, sir, roach!" replied the owner.

"Then there's no need for you to worry," replied the fisherman calmly, "for I happen to be fishing for trout."—London Mail.

Needed.

A young minister had obtained a kirk in a mining district in Scotland. After a deal of difficulty he managed to secure lodgings. The first morning following his arrival the landlady knocked at the door with the unusual query as to whether he had washed himself.

"Yes," he said. "Why?" "Because," she replied calmly, "I'm gwan to mak' a dumplin' for the dinner, an' I wad like the len' o' the basin!"—Tit-Bits.

THE QUEEN'S MARIES.

On the occasion of the coronation of the Queen it is proposed that the Maries of Canada shall unite with their name-sakes throughout our British Empire in offering a gift to Her Majesty.

The Imperial Order of the Daughters of the Empire have been asked to collect for the gift in Ontario. Contributions will be received from five cents to five dollars, and may be given only by those who bear the name Mary, May, Maria, Marian, or Marie. A list of contributors will be forwarded but not the amount given by each.

The choice of the gift will be left entirely to the Queen. It is hoped that the Maries of Canada will appreciate the opportunity of showing

M. Henry Pol, the famous bird-charmer of the Tuilleries, France, whom all Paris knows and admires, has been decorated by the Minister of Agriculture.

His daily "receptions" of his birds in the Tuilleries form one of the most fascinating entertainments in Paris, and are always watched by hundreds of interested sightseers. M. Pol feeds his chirping flock regularly every morning, to the delight of children and grown-up strangers. He has very appropriately been called the Saint Francis of the Tuilleries, and rightly so; for like the Saint of Assist, he has only to call the birds from the trees and they come down to perch on Synopsis of Canadian Northwest Land Regulations.

ANY person who is the sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. The applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub Agency for the district. Entry by proxy may be made at any agency, on certain conditions, by father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister of intending homesteader.

Duties—Six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within three miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres solely owned and occupied by him or his father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter section alongside his homestead. Price $100 per acre. Duties—Must reside six months in each of six years from date of homestead entry including the time required to earn homestead patent and cultivate fifty acres extra.

A homesteader who has exhausted his homestead right and cannot obtain a pre-emption may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $500 per acre. Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate fifty acres and erect a house worth $500.00.

Familiar Sayings.

"I don't like your weigh," remarked the customer to the dishonest grocer.
"I hope I make myself clear," said the water as it passed through the filter.

"Reading makes the full man, but writing doesn't," complained the half starved poet.

"My resources are all tied up," said the tramp as he placed his bundle on a stick.

"The rest is silence," quoted the musician, explaining the meaning of that term to his pupil.

"This is a complete give away," remarked Papa Santa Claus as he dashed stripping the Christmas tree.

"I call that treating a friend in a rather distant manner," said the doctor as he hung up the receiver after prescribing over the telephone.—

his chirping flock regularly every morning, to the delight of children and grown-up strangers. He has very appropriately been called the Saint Francis of the Tuilleries, and rightly so; for like the Saint of Assist, he has only to call the birds from the trees and they fly down to perch on his hand or his shoulders. He gives them names which they remember, speaks to them, and they listen. His charm over the birds is really remarkable. Each sparrow has its name, and picturesque names, too, they are. They range from the Christian names of Jean and Jeannette to those of revolutionary celebrities. "There is Philippe, now," he will say. "I have not seen him for several days. Come here, Philippe, you little rascal; where have you been all this time?" And Philippe, a very plump, dark brown sparrow with a sly look, would fly out of a crowd of twenty or thirty watching for crumbs on the gravel and perch on M. Poul's finger. His success is the result of years of effort, as he used to pass through the gardens on his way to work.

What He Ought to Do.

"Miggles," says the old friend, "you got me to give your brother a job a month ago, didn't you?"

"Yes, and I was mighty glad you took care of him. He's been the deadwood of the family for years. It was a deucedly clever thing of you to—"

"Well, I just wanted to say to you that if you want to make your pull good you'll have to come around and do his work for him."

How to Clean Old Ivory.

Antique ivory requires a good deal of care before it can be made to regain its original lustre and lose the dingy yellow tint which disfigures it. Prepared chalk, sal volatile and olive oil made into a paste should be rubbed on the ivory figure or carving with a piece of wash leather, a little more being then rubbed over it and left to dry on. When dry the powder will brush off easily.

Quick Changes.

Husband—But you had a new one only a short time ago.

Wife—Yes, but my friend Ellen is to be married, and I can't wear the same dress that I wore at her last wedding.

It Grows Hair

Here Are Facts We Want You to Prove at Our Risk.

Marvelous as it may seem, Rexall "93" Hair Tonic has grown hair on heads that were once bald. Of course, in none of these cases were the hair roots dead, nor had the scalp taken on a glazed, shiny appearance.

Rexall "93" Hair Tonic acts scientifically, destroying the germs which are usually responsible for baldness. It penetrates to the roots of the hair, stimulating and nourishing them. It is a most pleasant toilet necessity, is delicately perfumed, and will not gum or permanently stain the hair.

We want you to get a bottle of Rexall "93" Hair Tonic and use it as directed. If it does not relieve scalp irritation, remove dandruff, prevent the hair from falling out and promote an increased growth of hair, and in every way give entire satisfaction, simply come back and tell us, and without question or formality we will hand back to you every penny you paid us for it. Two sizes, 50c. and $1.00. Sold only at our store—The Rexall Store. T. B. Wallace, Druggist.

point when the pictures upon their bodies represent a small fortune spent in this way. Meanwhile when their working days were over they had to be kept by the state instead of having for their old age the money expended on transforming themselves into walking picture galleries. To such an extent was this carried that with a view to encouraging thrift the Government forbade the practice by law, making it such a serious offence that so far as the Japanese themselves are concerned it is practically stamped out, although there are still Japanese tattooers who draw their clients from foreigners visiting the country.

It seems rather curious that a thing of this sort should be forbidden by law, but it is not nearly for so remarkable a reason in this case, as it is with the Maoris in New Zealand. The Maoris have a special kind of tattooing their designs being executed in the form of elaborate rings, lines and curves upon the face. So wonderful were some of these designs that, after death well-tattooed heads used to be smoked dried and kept. After a while these became curiosities which commanded a ready market, and no sooner did the Maoris discover this than they took advantage of it. When ever any member of another tribe was captured in battle they used to tattoo them, and when perfect kill them, and keep the heads as articles of merchandise. They used even to display the living heads to prospective buyers and then kill whichever was chosen! This got to such a pitch that the practice had to be stopped by law, and the supply of heads now having run short they have an ever-increasing market value. There are several specimens in the British and other museums. The average value of a good head is about $250.

Native methods of tattooing are usually very crude. After the Maori tattooist had been at work the face of the subject used to swell to such an extent that he had to be fed through a funnel. In Samoa and the Pacific Islands the natives use fish bones to pick the skin, with the result that cases of blood poisoning are frequent, while in parts of Central Africa a kind of "relief" work is done, dirt being introduced into the wounds so that they fester for months and eventually leave a raised whitish scar.

TATTOOING.

It Is Extensively Practiced All Over the World.

Nearly all must be familiar with the crude tattoo designs, of anchors, ships, and so on that sailors love to have upon their arms and chests. But the professional tattooist can import to his skin pictures pretty well all colors except white, so that he can produce the most elaborate and beautiful designs. Nor is his work limited to covering small areas, for while many men are satisfied with a simple design, others have different tastes, and men have been tattooed all over from head to toe.

Travelers, sportsmen, and army officers seem to favor tattooing more than other classes, and the designs one is asked to execute are many and varied. Among officers the most usual is the regimental crest. Sportsmen usually favor something which reminds them of their favorite sport. Perhaps the funniest case recalled was a man who had texts from the Bible tattooed all over him till he was a perfect walking Testament.

Tattooing is practiced very extensively in the east, and it is no doubt for this reason that so many travelers submit to tattooing. They get accustomed to seeing people tattooed, and feel that they must be tattooed too. But there are sometimes other reasons. Natives frequently think more of a man if he is tattooed, and so the traveler may reap a real advantage. This is particularly so in West Africa. If their boss is tattooed the niggers

Census Secrecy.

"Among lodgers," said the census enumerator to a reporter, "and more especially among women, there seems to be some anxiety on the question of disclosing their ages. Their idea is that they will have to give particulars to their landlady. The latter may gossip, and the lodger, in consequence, suffer in business or employment."

"As a matter of fact," he continued, "there will be no such difficulty, for the lodger must receive a separate census-paper from us. When he or she has filled it up, it can be handed over to the enumerator direct, or given in a sealed envelope to the landlord or landlady."

"And, as for officials, they are all required to take an oath of secrecy."

"With hotels, boarding-houses, clubs, and the like, however, the person in charge must fill up a schedule with respect to all the inmates, and in these cases the only way out is for the boarder to become a lodger for one night only—the night of April 2nd."

He Sent His "Best" Remedy.

The young daughter of Mrs. T. S. Dougall, 523 Flora Avenue, Winnipeg, was arranging some of her doll's washing on a clothes rack, beside the stove, when she fell, and her hand came in contact with the hot stove. She sustained a serious burn, and her screams brought her mother quickly to the spot.

"I sent to the druggist for the best remedy he had for burns," she says, "and he sent back a box of Zam-Buk. He said that there was nothing to equal it. I applied this, and it soothed the pain so quickly that the child laughed through her tears. I bound up the hand in Zam-Buk, and each day applied Zam-Buk frequently and liberally, until the burn was quite cured."

"The little one was soon able to go on with her play, and we had no trouble with her during the time the burn was being healed."

Zam-Buk Soap should also be used by all mothers for baby's bath, and for skin troubles rashes, pimples, etc.

GREAT INVENTIONS.

Some Things That Have Done the Most Good for Mankind.

GREAT INVENTIONS.

Some Things That Have Done the Most Good for Mankind.

The savage didn't invent; he discovered. When he first rubbed two sticks together and produced fire he changed the course of the universe. Man and woman had been hunting and gathering herbs side by side before; now one must stay at home and mind the fire. The woman chose the hearth, and the man the hearth. It is so at the present day and ever will be. When an early woman dropped a hot stone in a wicker jar and made soup she had done more than the person who first communicates with Mars.

The greatest little invention that has been given to the world is the lucifer match. It was invented in 1827. It is small, but, like Pott's candle, it has shed a great light into the world. It gave man mastery of fire. Before this fire had been a contrary hired man, but now it became an obedient servant.

Mankind was centuries old before it produced the first great invention—the compass. Man had been kept at home, made to hug the seashore for fear of being lost should he get out of sight of land. Over the horizon of the sea was the end of the world. Marco Polo, the first globe trotter, brought it from China, where it had been known about for centuries. It was a piece of iron stuck on a board floating in the water; no one had the slightest idea in the world why it should swing around to the north. Could Marco Polo, or Flavio Gioja—who was the real inventor—see a modern compass they wouldn't know what it was. When Columbus got a compass he got more than he did when the queen gave him her jewels. The compass gave us the new world.

When James Watt held down the lid of his mother's tea kettle, he put himself into every child history, and solved the question of power. Steam is mankind's best servant. One pint of water made into steam will lift 37 tons a foot off the ground. The puny arm of man, that the poets write about, becomes a mighty arm when backed by steam.

A companion servant to steam is electricity. Electricity is the more versatile, but as yet has not been such an important factor in man's battle with nature as steam. But its future is all before it.

Like gunpowder, it was known about centuries before it was put to use. Thales, of Miletus, knew that amber rubbed together would attract leaves and broken bits of straw, 600 years before Christ. It was left to Dr. W. Gilbert, in 1651, to make the first practical discovery; and it was more than 200 years after this that electricity was induced. Dr. Gilbert thought that it was the heat in the amber that attracted the leaves, or something that way. And that is about all we know about it yet.

Humanity In War.

The first man, so far as history can speak on the subject, to do anything to mitigate the hardness of the usages of war was Marcus Aurelius, the noblest of the Roman emperors. Of this illustrious man De Quincy writes, "Marcus Aurelius first resolutely maintained that certain inextinguishable rights belonged to every soldier simply as a man, which rights capture by the sword or any other accident of war could do nothing to shake or diminish." Modern humanitarianism in war dates from about the beginning of the eighteenth century.

sons. Natives frequently think more of a man if he is tattooed, and so the traveler may reap a real advantage. This is particularly so in West Africa. If their boss is tattooed the niggers boast about it to the others, and feel that they are on a higher plane!

Almost every eastern country has its own particular style of tattooing. In Burmah, all the natives are tattooed as a matter of course with a pair of figured black pants extending from the waist to just above the knee, and until this design has been executed they are not considered to have reached manhood.

In China the art is a very old one, but, although the designs are both varied and picturesque the work is somewhat crude, and cannot be compared with that of Japan, where until late years there was such a tremendous craze in this direction that the state put a stop to it. Every Jap of the lower classes used to rush off to the nearest tattooist the moment he had a little money, and as the work is by no means cheap men reached a

If you are sick or run down your Druggist will give you FREE a 50c. bottle of Psychine and we will pay him.

Read this:

We are receiving many thousands of requests from every part of Canada for the 50-cent bottle of Psychine, which we buy from the druggist and give away.

Unprecedented interest is being taken in Psychine.

And it is doing some very remarkable things, making some very extraordinary cures.

Not more than we anticipated however.

With our third of a century's experience with Psychine.

With our knowledge of the hundreds of thousands it has already cured, in mind.

We have the most absolute confidence in what it can and will do.

Since scientists know now all about the white corpuscles of the blood, or the phagocytes, the scavengers which devour every germ of disease that enters the body.

Since they also tell us that certain herbs—nature's remedies—help and build up these white corpuscles.

And since these herbs are compounded in Psychine, we know why Psychine is so phenomenally successful in treating disease.

We know why its use is indicated in the following diseases:

La Grippe	Bronchial Coughs
Bronchitis	Weak Lungs
Hemorrhages	Weak Voice
Sore Throat	Spring Weakness
Anaemia	Early Decline
Female Weakness	Catarrhal Affections
Indigestion	Catarrh of Stomach
Poor Appetite	Night Sweats
Chills and Fevers	Obstinate Coughs
Sleeplessness and	Laryngitis and
Nervous Troubles	Dyspepsia
After-effects of Pleurisy, Pneumonia and La Grippe.

Now, we don't ask you to take our word for the tremendously beneficial effect of Psychine. Fill out the coupon below, mail it to us and we'll give your druggist an order (for which we pay him the regular retail price) for a 50-cent bottle of Psychine to be given you free of cost.

We will undoubtedly buy and distribute in this manner, hundreds of thousands of these 50-cent bottles of Psychine.

And we do that to show our entire confidence in this wonderful preparation.

A confidence that has been based on our thirty years' experience with this splendid preparation, with a full knowledge of the hundreds of thousands of cures it has made.

WOMEN MAY AVOID OPERATIONS

By taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

The following letter from Mrs. Orville Rock will prove how unwise it is for women to submit to the dangers of a surgical operation when it may be avoided by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. She was four weeks in the hospital and came home suffering worse than before.

Here is her own statement.
Paw Paw, Mich.—"Two years ago I suffered very severely with a displacement. I could not be on my feet for a long time. My physician treated me for seven months without much relief and at last sent me to Ann Arbor for an operation. I was there four weeks and came home suffering worse than before. My mother advised me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I did. Today I am well and strong and do all my own housework. I owe my health to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and advise my friends who are afflicted with any female complaint to try it."—Mrs. ORVILLE ROCK, R. R. No. 5, Paw Paw, Michigan.

If you are ill do not drag along until an operation is necessary, but at once take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

For thirty years it has been the standard remedy for women's ills, and has positively restored the health of thousands of women. Why don't you try it?

Where Women Don't Like to Shop.

The stranger in Korea finds that he has struck topsyturvydom when he learns that women do not like shopping, that the prominent merchants keep their wares concealed in closets instead of displaying them in show-cases and that the customer who does not fancy the first piece of goods brought from concealment is likely to be told that the merchant is quite sure he has nothing better. Elsewhere the street sign plays an important part in attracting trade. The large merchant houses in Korea are entirely without street signs.

Fooing a Solomon.

An Irish magistrate was perplexed by the conflicting claims of two women for a baby, each contending that she was the mother of it. The justice remembered Solomon's procedure in a similar case and, sending an officer of the court for a carving knife, declared he would give half to each. The women were shocked, but had no doubt of the authority and purpose of his worship to make the proposed compromise. "Don't do that!" they both screamed in unison. "You can keep it yourself."—From "Irish Life and Humor."

BREAD AND BUTTER PERIOD.

It Makes a Woman an "Understanding Companion."

There is no gainsaying the fact that the broad-minded man has come to appreciate the importance—to himself—of the wife of business or professional training. The world has not yet grown accustomed to the woman in business. Woman herself has not grown accustomed to it, for the world forces her into a false position. Perhaps, after all, it is nature and not the world, for of the business or professional woman only the wife or the widow who has closed the door of romance in her life regards the business or professional life as the ultimate life. Usually it merely is a bread and butter period until some man comes along to make the bread and butter for her.

But that bread and butter period makes her a more understanding companion to the man who comes and takes her back into the life for which she was intended. Oh, yes, my fair readers, that is it—the life for which she was intended. You may place at the head of your creed "I believe in the business training for a woman," and you may believe it sincerely, but you prove, every one of you, that your creed closes, "but I believe she was intended for a home," because the minute the right opportunity offers to return to the home, how long does it take you to shut down your desk and smile a farewell to the business world? The business opportunity only gives you a chance to be independent in your choice. You have the advantage over your grandmother in being self-supporting and dependent only on the man—not a man.

Will many wives who have known the exhaustion of a commercial day in a great city make the demands upon the evening of the husband which will come from the wife who has not known? Will the wife who has known the hours spent in the making of the dollar demand the dollar unreasonably as readily as the wife who has not known the effort required? Will not personal knowledge of public life and its competition and annoyances make a woman more responsive in her sympathy? If it does not, this woman indeed is hopeless and selfish, and would be so no matter what her training or lack of it.

In the Age of Science.

The bear of a man was still, of course, a bear of a man. No artifice could substantially alter that fundamental condition of life, the result being that he glowered at his breakfast much as usual.

"Nothing but proteids, carbohydrates and ash content. Can't you manage to get something different once in awhile?" he growled.

What, in fine, had the advances of science done to ease the lot of the patient wife? Was there less dismay in store for her?—Puck.

What He Did on the Outside.

Bob, the man of all work in an up-town laundry, was shuffling through the office yesterday when the manager, wondering how Bob managed to live on $5 a week, said:

"Bob, what do you do on the outside to earn a living?"

"I see de manager ob a laund y, sah, an' I makes a right comfortable livin,' sah."

The manager looked surprised. "What's the name of your laundry, Bob?" he asked.

"Hannah Maria Johnson, sah."

The Opal.

The superstition against the opal began through the stonecutters, each of whom would anxiously ask every other if he had had any luck in his cutting, for the opal contains 13 per cent. water and is exceedingly brittle and therefore difficult to cut successfully.

A Medicine That Does Not Cost Anything Unless it Cures.

The active medicinal ingredients of Rexall Orderlies, which are odorless, tasteless and colorless, is an entirely new discovery. Combined with other extremely valuable ingredients, it forms a perfect bowels regulator, intestinal invigorator and strengthener. Rexall Orderlies are eaten like candy and are notable for their agreeableness to the palate and gentleness of action. They do not cause griping or any disagreeable effect or inconvenience.

Unlike other preparations for a like purpose, they do not create a habit, but instead they overcome the cause of habit acquired through the use of ordinary laxatives, cathartics and harsh physic, and permanently remove the cause of constipation or irregular bowel action.

We will refund your money without argument if they do not do as we say they will. Two sizes, 25c. and 10c. Sold only at our store—The Rexall Store. T. B. Wallace, Druggist.

BALZAC WAS HUNGRY.

A Hundred Oysters and Twelve Cups Just Started His Meal.

If Honore de Balzac, the "Shakespeare of the novel," did not live to a great age it was probably due to his reversal of nature's rules for work and recreation. He labored as no other man in the history of literature has labored and then, after periods of intense application, would go to the opposite extreme. Frederick Lawton, his latest biographer, makes one feel some of the folly of this as well as the comedy.

He not only burned the midnight oil, but would keep up his eighteen or twenty hours' daily labor for weeks together until he no longer that he was engaged on was finished.

During these spells of composing he would see no one, read no letters, but write on and on, eating sparingly. Spring his coffee and refreshing his jaded anatomy by taking a bath, in which he would lie for a whole hour, plunged in meditation.

One of these prolonged claustrations, in October, 1834—the day was

THAT BLANK LOOK.

Scientist Says "the Baby Stare" Is Not a Thing to Be Admired.

Where is the man who sometime or other in his career has not owned to the fascination which lies in a baby stare? Now come the scientists, who somehow or other manage to spoil many a good thing sooner or later, telling us that the baby stare is something of which to be ashamed rather than proud. They state—rather convincingly, too—that that peculiarly expressionless expression which every devotee of the footlights has endeavored to affect at one time or another is nothing less than a token of imbecility, undeveloped faculties, and possibly of criminal tendencies. There is more credit in raving eyes that will not behave, eyes with some sort of expression, even if it be a naughty one, than in having eyes that are blank and staring like a baby's.

Innocence, childish charm and fascination—those are the qualities which the woman who cultivates round eyes and blank expression thinks her face portrays. Ridiculous, say the scientists. In the first place, because it is an affectation the baby stare is repulsive to a discriminating individual. In the second place, the woman who affects it is copying something which, when unassumed, means criminality. And what woman of even mediocre intelligence cares to cultivate the look found on the countenances of imbeciles and criminals? It has been found that the baby stare—when it is perfectly natural, that is—in the face of an adult is an almost certain indication of some mental shortcoming which may develop along criminal lines or may grow into a harmless imbecility. The child, every one agrees, is a miniature savage with no sense of responsibility, and the grown man or woman with the child's eyes and vacant face may be almost anything but normal.

Many of the most irresponsible criminals have had the child's face, and these same scientists are prone to believe that the baby stare was the chief fascination of many of the famous and malicious beauties of history. With them the stare was not an affectation, but an index to their shortcomings. Man is always fascinated by the insidious. The baby stare is ogsnead or water (the water to be stirred at the same time). It will alter a few hours, by precipitating to the bottom the impure particles, so purify the water that it will be found to contain nearly all the freshness and clearness of spring water. Save Babies' Lives. For Babies and Small Children. (Made in France.)

Dr. Hennequin's Infant Tablets saved our little girl's life. Three doctors said she could not live. The Tablets cured her.—Mr. E. R. McBRIDE, Napanee, Ont.

My baby was so weak from sickness that he could hardly walk. We thought he would die. We could find nothing to help him. I was given a sample package of three Hennequin Tablets; we used them; I saw a change at once. We secured the Tablets and our baby improved every day, and is now a bright, fat, good natured boy; you could not believe he was the same child. They certainly cured my baby and saved his life. I believe them to be the best medicine ever sold for babies. Mothers if your babies are not well take my advice and try these Tablets.—Mrs. JAMES RIDDELL, Barrydale, Ont.

We have hundreds of such letters. If the Tablets were not what you need we would not offer to give them away and prepay them. If your baby is not well send for trial package. Hennequin Tablets have the letter "H" stamped upon them—this is your guarantee. All dealers, 25c per package, or 5 for $1.00 sent postpaid to any address.

but wrote on and on, eating sparingly. Spitting his coffee and refreshing his jaded anatomy by taking a bath, in which he would lie for a whole hour, plunged in meditation.

One of these prolonged claustrations, in October, 1834—the day was Sunday—he interrupted by a call, most unexpected, on his friend Werdet. His face was sallow and gaunt with vigil. He had been stopped in the description of a spot, he explained, by the uncertainty of his recollections and must go into the city in order to refresh them. So he invited Werdet to accompany him in playing truant for the day.

The morning was spent in the slums, where he gathered the information required, and the afternoon they whiled away in listening to a concert at the Conservatoire. There he was welcomed by the fashionables of both sexes, notwithstanding his shabby costume, which he had donned in view of his morning's occupation.

On quitting the concert room he carried Werdet off to dine with him at Verdy's, the most expensive and aristocratic restaurant in Paris.

The place was full of guests, and those who were in proximity to the table where the two newcomers sat down were astonished to see the following menu ordered and nearly all consumed by one man, since Werdet, being on diet, took only a soup of a little chicken. A hundred oysters, 12 chops, a young duck, a pair of roast partridges, a sole, hors d'œuvre, sweets, fruit (more than a dozen pears were swallowed), wines, coffee, liquors.

Never since the time of Rabelais or perhaps Louis XIV. had such a Gargantuan appetite been witnessed. Falzac was recouping himself for fasting.

Why Gold Is Precious.

Pure or fine gold will stand any test it may be put to in comparison with other metals; it can be rolled or hammered, extending it in any direction, until it becomes transparent. It can also be drawn into a thread as fine as human hair. It melts at about 2,000 F., and though it may be kept in a molten state for an indefinite time it loses none of its weight, even should the heat be increased. The color is unaffected by air, water or heat, and will stand any test of oxidation. No simple acid will dissolve or attack pure gold.

In conjunction with silver gold is the first metal with which man became acquainted, and is the most valuable by reason of the vast number of uses to which it is put. It is found in almost every country in a metallic state, and nearly always in crystals. The old Egyptian symbol for gold signified divinity and perfection. The chemical term used today is aurum.

A Dish of Peacocks.

A Roman dinner at the house of a wealthy man consisted chiefly of three courses. All sorts of stimulants to the appetite were first served up, and eggs were indispensable to the first course. Among the various dishes we may instance the guinea hen, pheasant, nightingale and the thrush as birds most in repute. The Roman gourmands held peacocks in great estimation, especially their tongues. Macrobios states that they were first eaten by Hortensius, the orator, and acquired such repute that a single peacock was sold for 50 denarii, the denarius being equal to about 8 1/2 pence of English money.—Chambers' Journal.

to believe that the baby stare is the chief fascination of many of the famous and malicious beauties of history. With them the stare was not an affectation, but an index to their shortcomings. Man is always fascinated by the insidious. The baby stare is insidious and may be the mask of more malevolence than the most brutal or crafty expression. So much for the nature of it as scientists see it.

No matter what these learned men have to say about the subject ordinary men and some not so ordinary love, better than all else in a woman's face the wide-eyed, startled fawn expression—which means so little and is just on and off like a mask. It is safe to say that when Antony raved in jealous wrath against Cleopatra the latter knew how to make the round, vacant eyes and stare innocently and at the same time fascinatingly at Marc, so that his wrath disappeared like down on the gale. When Semiramis wanted another man put out of the way she didn't scout around the palace and the temple of the sun hunting the king with a pained and anxious expression. It is safe bet that she waited till he came around and then gave him the baby stare—the man disappeared. Not that the girl with the baby stare cannot look as slyly, maliciously, coyly, wisely, or enticingly as any other. The baby stare is just a part of a beauty's stage setting.

Crass Ignorance.

An unsophisticated resident of a small town up the state had never been in court before and was not familiar with the interrogative manner in which a lawyer juggles a witness. When he returned home in the evening a friend asked him how he had made out.

"Oh, I made out all right," he replied, "but I never saw such a bum lot of lawyers in my life."

"What was the matter with them?" queried the friend.

"A whole lot was the matter with them," answered the witness. "Judging from the million questions they asked me there ain't a darned one of them that knows anything about the case."

The Thumb.

Thumbs have been appreciated ever since the world began. The ancients used to call the thumb the other hand. Barbarous kings used to swear and make compacts by their thumbs. In Rome it was a sign of favor to wring and kiss the thumb and of disfavor or disgrace to lift it up or turn it outward. A man who was hurt in his thumbs was excused from serving in the Roman wars. Some of the secondarily citizens used to cut off their thumbs so as to remain at home and get rich. Teachers used to punish their pupils by biting their thumbs.

No Harm Done.

"Dear me, pa," said the beautiful heiress, "you'll mortify me to death yet."

"What's the matter now, Lil?"

"You told John to go down to the depot and get the earl's baggage right out loud so that he couldn't help hearing you. Why can't you learn to say station and luggage?"

"Oh, don't mind that. The earl won't care. He's got used to United States talk. He asked me this morning how I got my dough and how much I had of it."

A Few Things Wanted.

"No; I believe he's out looking at work. There are some men digging a cellar down at the corner, and he doesn't seem able to get any farther."

MINISTERIAL LAPSES

WHEN PREACHERS ARE VICTIMS OF WAYWARD TONGUES.

One Unfortunate Declared That Jonah Was Incarcerated in the "Whelly of the Bale"—How a Sermon of 1854 Was Made to Do Duty Over Again—The Reason Why the Levite Passed by on the Other Side.

During a ministry extending over twenty years I have heard some very strange remarks by parishioners, says a writer in London Answers.

I knew very well in my first curacy, in a village in Lincolnshire, a woman whose daughter had been to the infirmary at H— for a slight operation. On her return home, I saw the daughter standing at the garden-gate with her mother. "How do you do, Mrs. S—?" I said. "And how's your daughter?" "Good morning, sir," she said. "Mary's a sight better, and she can breathe all right now, since the 'polyanthus' was taken out of her nose!"

The vicar was a very old man. He had been in the parish forty-two years. During my last year there I was practically in charge of the service, but now and then, when he was able, he occupied the pulpit. His eyesight was bad, and he was altogether unfit to compose fresh sermons, so had to fall back on old ones.

One Sunday morning we were alarmed with a discourse, as nearly as I can remember, as follows: "We are standing to-day," he said, "face to face with a great power in the East. We are on the verge of war." (Long pause.) "We are—we are—or—we are on the brink of war with Russia. I—er—we, I mean—we will now proceed to consider the next point." In the vestry, after service, I asked him about this projected war, as I had seen nothing about it in the papers. "That sermon," he said to me, with a very far-off look in his eyes, and a slight suspicion of a smile—"that sermon I wrote in 1854!"

I was taking the children's service one afternoon in church, and telling them about the parable of the Good Samaritan. I explained how the man went from Jerusalem to Jericho and fell among thieves, and how the priest passed by, and the Levite, and so on. Then I began asking questions. "What was the reason," I said, "why the priest passed by?" A small boy held up his hand. "Yes, my boy," I said. "If you, please, sir, because he saw as he had been robbed already!"

It is very difficult to get the unlearned and ignorant to respond correctly in the marriage service. "Wilt thou have this woman to be thy wedded wife?" I said to one happy bridegroom. "In course I will," he said. The ring would not go on one bride's finger. "Wet it," I said to the bridegroom. He did wet it. He put it in the palm of his hand and spat on it!

On another occasion when the ring would not go on easily, the bridegroom said, "Sink yer finger, lass; yer 'and's swelled." "I plight thee my troth!" is very often transposed to "I plight thee my truth." I am not answerable for the following, but it was told me. A very haughty and dignified archdeacon was marrying his butler to his cook. "Wilt thou have this woman to be thy wedded wife?" he said. "Thank you, sir," he replied, touching his forehead with his forefinger. "Thank you, sir! After you, sir!"

A very rapid extempore preacher was discoursing one night on the subject of Jonah in the whale's belly, but his tongue got tied up, and he said "in the bale's whelly." Instantly correcting himself, he said, "Of course, I mean in the whelly of the bale."

CRIPPLE FROM RHEUMATISM

NOW IN PERFECT HEALTH THANKS TO "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

VANCOUVER, B.C., Feb. 1st, 1910. "I am well acquainted with a man, known to thousands in Vancouver, Victoria and New Westminster, who for nearly a year was practically a cripple from Rheumatism. He was so troubled with the disease that he found it difficult to even turn over in bed. His heart appeared so weak that he could hardly walk up stairs."

Last June, he received a sample of "Fruit-a-tives". He used them and dates his recovery from that time. To-day, there is no man in Vancouver enjoying better health.

He was building a house this fall and shingled a good part of the roof in a driving rain, without suffering any bad effects."

Mr. R. E. Mills, (assistant postmaster at Knowlton, Que.) also writes:

"I honestly believe that 'Fruit-a-tives' is the greatest Rheumatism cure in the world." Try it yourself.

HELPING THE CLOVER SEEDING.

During every season since 1905, the Bacteriological Laboratory of the Ontario Agricultural College has sent out to farmers and others, cultures of bacteria for inoculating seed of alfalfa and other clovers in order to aid in insuring a better catch of the seeding. The bacteria resemble of the kind which live in the small nodules or "knots" which are naturally formed on the roots of clovers, and which may usually be readily seen when a clover or alfalfa plant is dug up and the earth carefully broken away from the roots so as not to break of the nodules. It is the business of these bacteria to draw upon the great supply of nitrogen in the air (about four-fifths of the air is nitrogen gas), and transfer it to the growing plant. Thus, by the aid of these nitrogen-gathering bacteria the clover plant is able to get its supply of this most valuable fertilizing element, nitrogen, from the air instead of having to depend upon what is in the soil. This explains the fact which every farmer knows, that clovers and other closely related crops are such good soil enrichers. When these crops are plowed under, the extra amount of nitrogen which has been stored up in them becomes available for succeeding crops.

It is absolutely essential that the nitrogen accumulating bacteria be present in order that the storing of nitrogen in the clover plant be accomplished. If a clover or alfalfa crop has been successfully grown as shown by thrifty, vigorous growth and the presence of plenty of nodules on the roots it indicates that the necessary bacteria are already present in the soil, and ready to penetrate the roots as soon as germination of the seed occurs. In the case of a new or unsuccessful seeding, however, it is probable that the bacteria are not present, and they should be supplied by some method of inoculation. Experience has shown that the most satisfactory method of inoculation is to apply the bacteria directly to the seed before sowing. This is the method

BATH.

Mr. and Mrs. H. D. Wemp and family left on Saturday last for Winnipeg. Mr. Fred Hagerman, recently of Toronto, purchased the pool room and barber shop on Friday last from H. D. Wemp and Sidney Howard.

Faber Covert, baker, has rented Mr. Rowse's bake shop and oven and took possession Friday. He intends to put a delivery wagon on the road.

H. C. Morris, of Toronto, spent a few days with G. A. Wartman's and left on Wednesday for Ottawa.

The island people are still travelling the ice here.

Mr. George Greer, of Nanaimo, paid our village a visit on Thursday officially.

Mrs. Prinyer, of Wolfe Island, visited here on Friday.

COLEBROOK.

The weather continues cold and backward. The snow is deep on some roads yet.

Earl Wallace, of Verona, was home for two weeks on a visit.

E. D. Shangraw has gone to St. Louis. He has accepted a good position in the cement works.

The prospects for making maple syrup this season is very poor. There has been very little made so far in this section.

Rev. Mr. McMullen occupied the pulpit in the Methodist Church here last Sunday. He and Rev. Mr. Batstone changed pulpits.

Miss O. Galbraith has resigned her position as school teacher in our school, and T. E. Furr is teaching in her stead. We are all pleased to have Mr. Furr as the teacher, as he is a resident of our town and a reliable first-class teacher.

ROBLIN.

What's the matter with our Roblin correspondent? Oh nothing, only he is waiting for the weather to settle.

We are having lovely weather at time of writing.

Mr. Robert McFarlane is doing a rushing business sawing wood.

Miss Grace Richardson and brother, Clayton, spent Monday in Nanaimo.

We are pleased to see Miss Violet Lasher out again after having the measles.

Mr. Fred Hall, Cobden, spent Saturday evening with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. Hall.

Mr. Clinton Keller was the guest of Miss Iva Hall on Sunday last.

Miss Violet Lasher spent Sunday with Miss Ruth Kimmitt.

$100 Reward $100

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up his constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

DOCTORS FAILED. RESTORED BY PERUNA.

Catarrh of the Lungs

Threatened Her Life.

Miss Ninette Porter, Braintree, Vermont, writes: "I have been cured by Peruna."

"I had several hemorrhages of the lungs. The doctors did not help me much and would never have cured me."

"I saw a testimonial in a Peruna almanac of a case similar to mine, and I commenced using it."

"I was not able to wait on myself when I began using it. I gained very slowly at first, but I could see that it was helping me."

"After I had taken it a while I commenced to raise up a stringy, sticky substance from my lungs. This grew less and less in quantity as I continued the treatment."

"I grew more fleshy than I had been for a long time, and now I call myself well."

BAY CENTRE.

For last week.

Mr. Editor.—It is some time since you have had a piece in your valuable paper from Hay Bay. Hoping it will be convenient to give you an opportunity every week or two of putting in a small sketch.

The spring is very backward this year. The ice is still carrying big loads of hogs and wood.

Miss Cora McCabe spent Friday evening with her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Huffman.

Quite a number attended the sugar social at Hawley and reported a good time.

Mr. William Nolan sold two De Laval Cream Separators in our neighborhood last week.

Mr. Walter Huffman called upon Miss Cora McCabe Sunday afternoon.

Mr. Ansley preached his farewell sermon last Sunday at the Sand Hill Presbyterian church.

Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Huffman and nephew, Walter, spent Sunday evening at the home of Miss Cora McCabe.

Mr. Marshall Card dropped out of our midst very unexpectedly after a short illness.

Miss Cora McCabe was seriously ill on Monday evening.

Mr. E. O. McCabe and family spent Wednesday at Mr. Thomas Bell's.

Mr. Walter Huffman spent Wednesday evening at the home of Miss Cora McCabe.

Miss Mabel Clark, wife of Mr. Wm. Joyce, passed away on Wednesday, after an illness of about two years.

The friends and neighbors of Mr. Fred Moore wish to congratulate him on his recent marriage.

The Bay Centre Ladies do not want to forget the meeting of the Ladies Aid on Tuesday afternoon next.

I think there should be a wedding soon! Don't you?

A very rapid extempore preacher was discoursing one night on the subject of Jonah in the whale's belly, but his tongue got tied up, and he said "in the bale's whelly." Instantly correcting himself, he said, "Of course, I mean in the whelly of the bale!"
There is a story told of a Cambridge undergraduate who had to read the lessons in chapel. He was young and nervous. The lesson was Gad's interview with David, and David's reply to Gad was partly on the bottom of one page, and partly on the top over the leaf. It was printed thus: "And David said unto"—then, turning over the leaf—"Gad, I am in a great strait." In the confusion, he added the word "him" as he turned over the leaf, and he read the sentence thus: "And David said unto him, Gad, I am in a great strait!"
The students of the theological college I was at had to preach a sermon once a term to each other in a church in the town, in the presence of the lecturers and tutors.
Mr. H—, in a highly nervous frame of mind, preached on the sacrifice of Isaac. He described how Abraham raised the altar of wood, and placed his son on it. He then, striking a very feeble dramatic attitude, and with a shaking, upraised hand, and a trembling voice, which sounded twenty miles away, exclaimed: "Isaac was laid upon the altar of wood, and Abraham's hand was raised to slay! Oh, what an awful blow it must have been to his poor old father! And, oh, what a terrible shock to his poor old mother!" Mr. H— was not complimented on his first attempt at sermonizing.
One Saturday, in F— cemetery, I had to bury a man who evidently belonged to some club, as a large number of men followed the remains. On the way to the grave, a man stepped up to me, and asked me to "say a few words" after I had read the burial office. "He was a great pal of ours," he said, "and a right-down good sort." I did say a few words. I reminded the assembly, which was very much moved, the women crying bitterly, of the great loss they had sustained in the death of our dear brother. I said he had no doubt lived a beautiful life, and, although he was unknown to me personally, and unknown to the world at large, I trusted that all would "mitate him in his life and conduct." I found out afterwards that he had left his wife, and, after turning her out, and selling up the house, he had taken to excessive drinking, and had died in the infirmary from delirium tremens.
The Source of Real Beauty.
A sweet, noble disposition is absolutely essential to the highest form of beauty, says Orson Swett Marden in Success. It has transformed many a plain face. A bad temper, ill nature, jealousy, will ruin the most beautiful face ever created. After all, there is no beauty like that produced by a lovely character. Neither cosmetic, massage nor drugs can remove the lines of prejudice, selfishness, envy, anxiety, mental vacillation, that are the results of wrong thought habits.
A Family Trait.
A school teacher had occasion to send one of the pupils home to his father, giving him a note to explain why. The note said:
Dear Mr. Jones—Your boy Johnnie talks a great deal during study hours.
The next morning Johnnie returned to school and handed an answer to his note to the teacher. Johnnie's father had written across it, probably with a pen dipped into the bluing bottle:
Dear Sir—It's no wonder. You ought to hear his mother.

unsuccessful seeding, however, it is probable that the bacteria are not present, and they should be supplied by some method of inoculation. Experience has shown that the most satisfactory method of inoculation is to apply the bacteria directly to the seed before sowing. This is the method to be followed with the cultures sent out by the College at Guelph.
Last year there were 3,375 of these bacteria cultures sent to 1,881 farmers, and of 771 who returned reports, two-thirds stated that the inoculation of the seed had aided in securing a better crop.
During the present season, the College will send cultures for the inoculation of the following kinds of seeds: Alfalfa, red or mammoth clover, alsike clover, white clover, crimson clover, vetches, peas, beans, sweet peas. Each kind of seed requires a different culture. The cultures are sent by mail with full instructions for their use. There is only one size package prepared, that being sufficient to treat sixty pounds of seed. There is a nominal charge of 25c for each package of culture to cover cost of material and postage. Applications should state the kind and amount of seed to be treated, and should be addressed with enclosed postal note, stamps, or money order, to S. F. Edwards, Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, Canada.

THE SERMON OF THE CLOCK

Its Tick, Tock, Tick Tock, Teaches a Lesson to Everybody

Much has been written concerning Germany's system of continuation schools and vocational or industrial schools. But it appears that the problem of caring for German boys of the critical period between 14 and 20 has by no means been solved. At 14 compulsory training ceases, and, of course, not all of the boys go into continuation or vocational schools. At 20 compulsory military training begins. What is to be done to control "the spirit of youth" during the long interval?

The Prussian ministry has conceived and proposed a scheme which may contribute to the solution of the problem. It has asked local authorities, professional associations of a voluntary character to be known as associations for the care of the young. They are to provide halls, reading-rooms, libraries, concerts and sports for the boys in question under proper guidance. They are to organize visits to museums, monuments, historic spots, and to arrange for lectures on heroic and patriotic chapters of history, as well as on morals, efficiency, clean living and rational physical exercise. The boys are to be organized into groups or unions, to have regular leaders and rules of conduct. Judges, officers, engineers, captains of industry are to be invited to address them.

The scheme is a modification of the Anglo-American Boy Scout movement, but it is evidently more ambitious and thorough—being characteristic of Teuton habits of mind. It is likely that the liberal and radical elements of Prussia will view it with suspicion, as there is much stress laid on military and "patriotic" teaching. The conservative elements should receive it with enthusiasm.

France has found a new place and a new line of work for Theophile Delcasse, who retired from the foreign ministry a few years ago on the insistent invitation of the Emperor William. He has come back as the head of the navy, after having himself headed an investigating committee which made it clear that the navy needed reform.

The naval arm, in fact, has been the one serious failure of the republic. Ten years ago the French navy held second place, after that of England. Since then it has been passed by the American navy and by the German navy, and it is in danger of being overtaken by that of Japan. The French navy, after having been known for years as a "fleet of samples"—of uncoordinated experiments—went in a few years ago for homogeneous classes of modern ships. But these were im-

Tick, tock, tick, tock,
This is the sermon of the clock.

Once there was a very unhappy man. The cause of his unhappiness makes no matter. It is never of any use to ask why one is miserable; the point is, how can he escape his gloom and become happy? In his dumb wretchedness he sat down one day and stared at the clock. If you will look at anything sympathetically enough and let your soul listen you will hear some of the secrets of nature. The way to learn nothing is to talk, and read, and gabble, and do so continually. Be still and things will speak to you.

Tick tock, tick tock,
Listen to wisdom, said the clock.

Furthermore, the clock said: You are a fool. This is always the first thing a human being ought to grasp. Wisdom abides in the things that are; folly and woe abide in the things that ought to be and the things that might have been. Hence only men are wicked and unhappy. Clocks, trees, rabbits, and fishes take the world as it is; men are always trying to change it and wishing it had been different. That is why flowers smile and women weep.

Tick tock, tick tock,
What do you think of that? said the clock.

Happiness abides somewhere hidden in what is. The trouble with you humans is that you are ever seeking for it in what is not. Of course, you cannot find it; for, in the first place, it isn't there; and, in the second place, if it were there you couldn't get it because there's no such place.

GOD IS, OF COURSE.

He is happy. It's only the kind of God that is not that is angry and vengeful and anxious to make people suffer.

All his universe is set for joy. The sky is glad, and the little streams giggle all day, and birds sing for love, and fishes wriggle for fun, and even a piece of wood is glad it's a piece of wood, and milk and bread and honey and fire are all quite comfortable bodies.

Tick tock, tick tock,
This world is a pretty good world,
said the clock.

People have either too much brains or too little. If you consider the idiots you find them usually merry. They laugh at nothing at all and play with their fingers, as kittens play with their tails. And then if you consider the sage you find him also happy, because he has come close to the heart of what is, which is that thing we call truth; and so he does not fret any more, for he is drinking at the hidden stream of joy that flows through the universe, through the sun and sand, and through little children and the blessed dead.

Tick tock, tick tock,
Cabbage's are happier than kings,
said the clock.

Yes, yes, continued the clock, happiness is the peculiar juice of the isness of things, and not of the oughtness. And then, look at me! What am I doing? Why, ticking, of course. It is my business to tick. Now, I have to make four ticks a second, or 240 ticks a minute, or 14,440 an hour, or 345,600 a day, and to think of a week makes my head reel; and a year amounts to millions and trillions where numbers cease to have any meaning and are just trills.

If I were a fool man I should be everlastingly counting up how much I had to do in a week or a year, and I should simply give one tremendous whizz with my works and quit in despair. Being a sensible clock, however, I remember that while I have several trillion ticks to do per year, and do just as many seconds to do them in, and do not have to work per year at all. I make one tick at a time, never bother about those I made or am to make, and everything goes off nicely.

Tick tock, tick tock,
For every tick there's a Now, said the clock.

And you people are just as happy and content as we clocks, if you only knew it.

MOST EVERYBODY IS HAPPY.

Our unhappiness is borrowed; borrowed from the past in shape of remorse or regret, and for the future in the shape of apprehension. The present is always tolerable. You drag up from the pit of the past your sins and follies and mistakes, and load them on the poor little now, and when you are not doing that you are reaching forward to the future and imagining things disagreeable that are going to happen and piling them upon the back of poor little now.

As a matter of fact, the past is not yours. It's God's. It belongs to the universe. It has been dissolved into the eternities, as a drop of water is lost in the sea. It is beyond your control. Let it go. All you need take from it is a little wisdom to help you to use your now. And the future is not yours. That is also God's.

Your heart has its beats. Earth has its seasons. Generations of men come and go as the hours upon my face. Everything has its moment. You have yours. It is—NOW!

For every creature except man, heaven is Now.

DR. FRANK CRANE.

HIS LITTLE GIRL

The white-haired lawyer looked up from the statement on his desk, and stared at the drawn face of the man before him.

"Does this disclose a correct state of affairs?" he rapped out.

"Absolutely!" returned the man wearily. "We have been barely solvent the last two years."

"And you have let the woman who is gone and the little girl continue to live in a fool's paradise?"

The other said nothing.

"I note here an item of £30 recurring every month as having been paid to the deceased," said the old gentleman. "Where is the figure for your salary?"

"You will not find it!" The answer came haltingly.

"I also note three or four items, amounting in all to £150, as having been paid to credit by a certain 'J. L.' Who is 'J. L.'?"

The man continued to stare at a worn patch in the carpet. The old solicitor took off his gold-rimmed spectacles, and proceeded to polish the lenses with his handkerchief.

"You understand, Lumley," he said quietly, "the affairs of the young lady are in my hands, and I have to ascertain the exact position. I am dependent on you for certain explanations, and I am sure you will assist."

James Lumley nodded.

"Very well," went on the lawyer. "Let us review the facts. Five years ago John Dodson died in harness, so to speak, and his widow decided to carry on the business. Knowing you to have been the right hand of her husband, conversant with his methods, the management of the shop naturally devolved on you. You had been with John Dodson for many years."

"He took me as a boy from school," James commented.

"Exactly! He and his family had taken to you. You had the trade at your finger-ends. There was no man better fitted to carry on the business. It was sound. Dodson had drawn a certain sum regularly each month from the profits; no reason existed for this arrangement to be varied under the proprietorship of the widow. I turn to the early pages of your book, and find a very satisfactory state of affairs. But later on, say a year, I note the takings have begun to fall off, and this retrogression has persisted until, to-day, we reach a level of something like half the former turnover. The business has gone back badly, that is evident; but, right up to the death of the widow, I find the monthly amount of her drawing regularly appearing. What I fail to find for the past three years is the weekly salary item of 50s. for yourself, and I do not understand these various amounts paid into credit by 'J. L.'"

"It was an old debt paid by instalments."

The lawyer looked up from the book, and regarded him searchingly.

"Yes," he said. "And the amounts for salary—were they applied to discharge the same debt?"

danger of being overtaken by that of Japan. The French navy, after having been known for years as a "fleet of samples"—of uncoordinated experiments—went in a few years ago for homogeneous classes of modern ships. But these were immensely slow in building, and some of them have never been properly equipped. Accidents and casualties have been numerous. Contracts have reeked with corruption. Discipline has relaxed to the point of demoralization. These are the conditions which Delcasse must face and overcome.

He proposes a new navy. Within the next ten years he would spend $250,000,000 on ships and $20,000,000 on navy yards. France can find the mere money as easily as any other country in Europe—more easily than most. But to spend it honestly and advantageously, to lace up the demoralized discipline of construction yard employees and of ships' crews and to bring the various units of the fleet to a high order of efficiency—all this is another and a harder task. It may be that Delcasse is the man for it. He showed force and decision in a serious foreign crisis. It will be a profit to France if the same qualities are allowed play for the handling of a domestic one.

BAGDAD FROM A DISTANCE.

Oriental City Looks Its Best From Afar Off.

Those of us who can think of Bagdad only as the magnificent city of Haroun-al-Raschid can hardly be expected to welcome the new international railway scheme. Let Bagdad remain forever inaccessible, except in dreams. But should the worst happen to Bagdad and the tomb of Zobeide become the shrine of British tourists the old city will have to undergo a few repairs. For it is safe from neither plague nor food. In one of the disasters of the last century the plague carried off 4,000 people daily for many days, and jealous Tigris overflowed its banks and destroyed several thousand houses and drowning 15,000 people. Like most Oriental cities, Bagdad looks her best from a distance. You miss the filthy, narrow streets, where two horses can hardly walk abreast, and behold a vision of luxuriant date groves, out of which rise little islands of green domes and graceful minarets. In the days of its splendor the East India Company maintained in the ancient city of the Caliphs a Resident; with a generous establishment; nowadays we are content with the usual modest Consular service.—London Chronicle.

MEANT WELL.

The old folks had had three days together. "You have a pretty place here, John," remarked the guest on the morning of his departure. "But it looks a bit bare yet." "Oh, that's because the trees are so young," answered the host comfortably. "I hope they'll have grown to a good size before you come again."

And him also happy, because he has come close to the heart of what is, which is that thing we call truth; and so he does not fret any more, for he is drinking at the hidden

Fashion Hints

FAVORITE COLORS.

One of the most striking novelties shows a twenty-four rib frame with a four gored canopy cover; a similar four gored top is shown on a sixteen rib frame. These new notes are extremely effective and, withal, not in the least impractical.

Several concerns are also featuring square tops and star shaped covers, which make unusually attractive displays. Pagodas are again being shown and a new variation of the pagoda top, known as the "bell top," the pagoda form in this instance being more deeply curved or "belled." The aeroplane parasol, elliptical in shape, the ribs from side to side being longer than those from front to back, is to be classed among the more extreme novelties.

Black and white combinations, hunter green, and the combinations of cerise, Helen pink, king's blue, American beauty, and old gold with black are the favorite colors in parasols. In some numbers the color is used in the form of a border which is hemstitched to the black cover. In other instances the upper portion of the cover is of the vivid color, while the lower portion is of black.

Border effects with warp print ribbon in combination with black, or a solid color, are also meeting with quite a degree of favor. Black and white combinations are always a favorite and practical choice, but this season they are stronger than ever owing to the prominent vogue for black and white effects in every department of dress. Striped and checked silks combined either with solid black or white, or with colored warp prints, are considered excellent merchandise.

A new model shown is trimmed in a novel way. A lattice work of dark green silk sewed over the light colored silk top. Pink satin roses and foliage are run at intervals through the lattice work, producing a very striking effect.

Many attractive little details in finish and trimming add interest to present novelties. Among these are the Japanese tip and ring of pearl, the little choux of chiffon, silk, or net on the handle and at the ferrule end of the stick.

Little bunches of satin or artificial roses are also attached to the handle, at the base of the ferrule end of the stick or on one or several of the gores, which give an especially French touch to some of the handsomest novelties.

Animal and bird handles are again being featured on high class parasols. Mushroom tops are still in high favor, being slightly smaller than previously. Small hooks and wooden loop handles are also shown. Mission handles are the favorites in medium grade goods.

SASHES IN BRIGHT COLORS.

Paquin, of Paris, is using sashes to a great extent, many being arranged in the form of single pendant ends, richly embroidered or beaded in contrasting color. These are oriental in appearance and add a brilliant touch of color to what might be otherwise a somber costume. These sashes are not formed or ribbons, but are of silk, with hand ornamentation. One of their great charms is the marvelous coloring, odd and unusual shades being combined.

To Mme. Paquin alone is due the introduction of this novelty, and the present showing, while emphasized now because of the number of models carrying these sashes, was antedated at least six months ago—at which time Paquin launched the first model of this character. The first dress carrying this style of sash was made for a private customer. It was a simple one piece dress of navy blue serge, with a little bit of black braid ornamentation. From one side of the front was suspended a single sash end of mauve silk, richly embroidered and ornamented in mingling shades of red and brown. This was the first herald of the Paquin sash idea, which now enters so strongly into the spring collection.

DANGER IN CLEANLINESS.

Odd Opinion of Distinguished London Physician.

Somewhat novel views of the subject of bacteriology and hygiene were advanced by Sir Almroth Wright, M.D., F.R.S., in an address recently.

There was a belief, he said, that by washing, people washed off microbes. We did take off a certain amount of microbes, but we also destroyed the protective skin, which was all around our bodies, like the tiles of a house. If one had a skin like a tortoise, microbes would never get through. To have a turkish bath was to take away one's horny protection.

A great deal of washing increases the microbes of the skin, he declared, so he did not think cleanliness was to be recommended as a hygienic method.

With regard to the belief that in cases of consumption, fresh air would make things right, he asked why it was this principle only applied to tubercular disease. He held it to be dreadful superstition. The whole doctrine of fresh air required to be revised.

Rich people, he asserted, surrounded themselves with all sorts of luxury, and took absolutely no interest in getting rid of the microbes that surrounded them. He had been in consultation with twenty-one doctors around a rich man's bed, and none of them knew anything about him.

Some people grumble about everything, be it right or wrong.

Beautiful Maiden—"Mr. Scapple, I can't have you coming to see me any more under a misapprehension. Papa isn't wealthy now. He lost all his money last week on the Stock Exchange." Persistent Caller—"That doesn't make any difference, Miss Flosser. I know it already. I'm one of the fellows who got his money."

stalments." The lawyer looked up from the book, and regarded him searchingly.

"Yes," he said. "And the amounts for salary—were they applied to discharge the same debt?" James Lumley threw out his hands.

"Is there any need for this?" he cried.

The man of law sat with fingertips pressed together.

"In half an hour Miss Dodson is coming here to learn exactly how her affairs stand," he returned. "I have to give her a full explanation. I want you to give me a clear perception, for her sake. Come, now, tell me all about it!"

"What is there to tell?" the young man cried. "The record of failure is in the books. There is nothing to say, except that I have done my best, and am sorry."

The lawyer shook his head.

"The girl will want to know more than that," he murmured. "And it is her due."

For a time the man sat, with his gaze again on the carpet. Then he rose, and strode the room.

"A record of failure!" he muttered. "I've fought, but the odds have been too heavy. I wonder if you'll understand when I tell you that I'm glad she who has gone never learned that anything was wrong, never guessed but that the business was flourishing."

"I understand," the lawyer said. "Tell me all about it."

"He took me as a boy, and taught me everything I know of my trade. I did my best, because I wished to show him that I was worthy. He made me free of his home. The kindness of his wife instilled within me an abiding affection. I learned to know and to love the little girl. She was of my age, capricious, and pretty, teasing and tender by turns, and I was her big brother."

"Some day—when she was a woman and I a prosperous man—the little girl and I were going to be married. So she often laughingly assured me, and the hope was as a constant spur urging me to prove worthy. Through all the passing years that brought me to young manhood and the little girl to blossoming womanhood, the crowning reward of my achievements lay in the fulfilment of that promise."

"The growing reserve that comes with the passing of childhood, the sense of new power, and the fresh outlook on life that arrives with the Maytime of a woman's existence, were with Mary as with other girls, opening up a new and delightful world. Her life became a round in which I had no place. I was her father's hand, tied to my duties. She visited the shop but seldom, and when she did, 'twas no longer 'Jim,' but 'Mr. Lumley.' It seemed that the woman had forgotten the promise made in girlhood, or regarded it as childish play."

"Not so with me! The desire to win and hold her but strengthened with the years. This held me constant in endeavor. Before me was the goal of a future partnership or the prospect of being my own master. For this I worked and saved. Some day when I had reached her level, I meant to remind the little girl of her promise."

"At twenty-five I had made myself competent to carry the business on my shoulders. During his last year, the old gentleman was frequently ailing, and added responsibility became mine. I count it no credit, but the knowledge of his trust and esteem has helped me many a time in the dark days, and has stimulated me to renew the fight against the odds. He knew — my kindly old master — that I was fitted. He knew that I would be my best. And so I have.

"When the charge was offered me by the sorrowing widow I took it gladly. The limited income they had hitherto enjoyed should be increased. My work should be a labor of love, which, in due time, should have its reward.

"For this I strove unceasingly, untiringly, bringing to bear on my intent the knowledge I had gained and the vigor of youth. In those days I would have laughed at the possibility of failure as at a jest. The future promised gladly. Mary, although not lacking for admirers, I believed to be heartwhole. No man ever took up a trust with greater confidence in himself.

"And for a time everything went swimmingly. Dodson's in thirty years had gained a wide reputation for value. The best trade of the district was ours. Competitors, from time to time, had endeavored to wrest a share of the business from us, and, sooner or later, had failed in the fight for lack of support.

"I imagined that I could gauge exactly the limits of any competition, and could effectively cope with it. But I was to be disillusioned. In an evil day the agent of the capitalist proprietor of a hundred stores throughout the kingdom spied out the land, and one morning I awoke to the fact that 'Smart's Market' was open but two doors away.

"From the first I realized that I was in for a stiff fight. This man, buying, as he did, enormous quantities on preferential terms, could well afford to cut prices as against the single shop-owner, and yet maintain his average of margin. I fought him hard, but he had the pull all along. If I came down to his prices he could go a little lower, and in certain lines I was forced to follow or lose customers, even though the transactions meant no profit. I was compelled to buy larger quantities, and on one occasion was bitten by falling markets. The takings suffered, the profits fell off. The business came, at last, to produce less than the charges upon it.

"I did not worry the woman who trusted me. It was my fight, and I was going to win through. In five years I had fought every inch. The sequel is in the sheet before you. Dodson's is still sound. The amount of the monthly drawing has been regularly paid, but the day when the tale of my failure must have been told could not be long deferred.

"If you could know the harrowing dread of my nights during the past few months at the nearing certainty of that revelation. I think you would realize something of my thankfulness that she did not live to learn. There remains—Mary."

He paused, and stood with clenched hands as if incapable of further utterance.

"You will tell her, sir, that Dodson's is still sound," he faltered presently; "but, for a time, she must be content with less. I think we have touched the low-rate mark."

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

INTERNATIONAL LESSON,
APRIL 16.

Lesson III. — The Resurrection
Morn, John 20. 1-18. Golden
Text, Luke 24. 34.

Verse 1. The first day of the week . . . early—The women had reverently watched the burial late on Friday. The near approach of the Sabbath had made possible only a temporary embalming, and they had had time on the Sabbath to prepare spices and ointments, and with these they returned at the break of dawn on Sunday. Besides Mary Magdalene, from whom, as Mark reminds us, Jesus had cast seven devils, there were the two women mentioned by Mark, whose presence is indicated by John in the next verse (we). It is characteristic of John to pass over what has already received ample attention from the other evangelists, and to bring out in strong light what they have omitted or somewhat slighted. His purpose here seems to be to thrust the Magdalene into prominence.

2 Simon Peter—The tomb was in a garden, near the cross, and therefore outside the city gates. It is to be presumed that Peter and the other disciple (John) were in the city.

They have taken away the Lord—Either she had not seen (which is more likely) what convinced John so quickly, or else she was too bewildered to make any interpretation for herself. Apparently, the sight of the stone rolled away was immediate evidence that the enemies of Jesus had borne his body to some other place.

4. They ran—The excitement of these followers of Jesus is written upon the face of the story (compare Mary's running in verse 2). John, being a younger man, would naturally outstrip Peter. But his excitement does not invalidate his testimony. His stooping and looking in is in the temper of a thoughtful man who misses none of the details. The impetuosity of Peter, entering at once into the tomb, is in marked contrast, but exactly like the irrepressible disciple who drew his sword in the garden, and was ever eager to make bold confession of loyalty to his master.

6. The linen clothes lying — The minuteness of designation here is impressive. John seems to be insisting that there are no signs of haste and stealth, but everything indicates deliberation. The napkin (7), which had been bound around the head of Jesus, had been carefully folded and laid in a place by itself, "suggesting the leisurely manner of a person changing his clothes."

8. He saw, and believed—What did he believe? The report of Mary? Then why this care in describing the exact position of the graveclothes? Plainly, no human hands had removed the body of the Lord. There was only one conclusion, that here had occurred a miracle, a resurrection. Up to this time the words of Jesus about his rising had had no meaning for them, and the scripture, which he had quoted concern-

FAVORITE RECIPES.

Corn Fritters. — Two cupfuls corn, two and one-half pounds flour, one teaspoonful salt, two teaspoonfuls baking powder, two well beaten eggs, sift flour, salt, and baking powder, then add eggs and corn.

Currant Tea Biscuits.—Two and one-half cupfuls flour, four teaspoonfuls baking powder, one-half cupful sugar, one-half teaspoonful salt, one egg, one cupful milk, one tablespoonful melted butter, one cupful currants.

Nut Loaf.—Two cups granulated sugar, one cup sweet milk, two-thirds cup butter, three cups flour (after it is sifted), three eggs (whites), one cup of nut kernels, chopped fine, two teaspoons baking powder. This is a splendid cake.

Mother's Spice Cake.—Two cups dark brown sugar, one-third pound butter, cream both well; add three eggs, one at a time; cream well, one quart flour, a little more if necessary; then add one cup sour milk in which is stirred one heaping teaspoon baking soda; while the sour milk is foaming pour into above mixture, then add one-half teaspoon ground cloves, one-half teaspoon ground nutmeg, three ground allspice, one-half cup raisins. Stir all and pour into two buttered cake pans. Bake in moderate oven.

Nut Bread.—Six cups flour, one and one-half cups sugar, six tablespoonfuls baking powder, one teaspoon salt, one and one-half cups coarsely chopped walnut meats, three cups milk, two eggs. Mix thoroughly in order given, put in bread pans and let rise half an hour. Bake in moderate oven one hour; will make three loaves. This is delicious, very nourishing and easily made.

Chicken.—Take a good fowl, joint and place in kettle with sufficient water, season to taste and cook until tender. Then remove the meat, dredge with flour and fry a delicate brown in pan with small quantity of butter or lard; then add some of the broth, enough to make gravy, and let simmer a few minutes. This makes an old fowl almost equal to a fried spring chicken.

Ginger Bread.—Half cup sugar, one cup New Orleans sugar, one-half cup butter, one teaspoon each of cinnamon, and ginger, one-half teaspoon of cloves, two teaspoons soda in one cup of boiling water, two and one-half cups of flour; add two well beaten eggs the last thing before baking. Lard may be used instead of butter if one teaspoon of salt is added.

Raisin Ice Cream.—Two cups best seeded raisins, finely ground; two cups sugar; four eggs; one pint cream; five mints fresh milk; one teaspoonful of pineapple flavoring. Beat eggs well and add sugar and beat again; add cream and beat again. Thin raisins with milk and stir thoroughly in freezer. Makes one gallon of ice cream fit for a makes coffee taste just as good as if it were added just before using and saves trouble.

Cream Substitute.—Substitute for cream in tea or coffee: Beat the white of an egg to a froth, then put into it a very small lump of butter and mix well, then stir it in gradually so it may not curdle. If perfectly mixed it will be an excellent substitute for cream.

SALADS.

Pimento Salad.—Three finely shredded pimentos, one cup finely shredded cabbage, two heaping tablespoons gelatin, two-thirds cup cold water, one-half cup sugar, one-third (meant) cup vinegar, one teaspoon salt, one cup boiling water, juice of one lemon. To the boiling water add the sugar, vinegar, and salt. Let come to the boil, then add the gelatin, soaked in cold water. When it begins to set add the pimentos and cabbage, with the juice of lemon; stir until thoroughly mixed. Slice and serve on lettuce leaves with mayonnaise dressing.

Red Apple Salad.—Select large red apples of uniform size, scoop into cups and put into cold water in which there is a little lemon juice until time to serve them. Mix the chopped apple with celery, grapefruit carpels, and mayonnaise, and fill the apples. Garnish with Maraschino cherries and broken walnuts, and lay on-leaves of lettuce. Serve with wafers spread with cream cheese.

PIE.

Banana Pie.—One cup of sifted banana pulp, one-half a cup of sugar, one cracker powdered fine, one-half a cup of milk, grated rind and juice of one-half a lemon or two tablespoonfuls of molasses. Mix the ingredients together and bake until firm in a pie pan lined with pastry, as for squash pie. The cracker may be omitted unless a rather firm pie be preferred.

Cranberry Pie.—Make a crust by stirring one-half cup of butter with three tablespoons of sugar to a cream, add one whole egg and stir well; then stir in one and a half cups of flour with one teaspoon baking powder. Have loose bottom tin, butter and from it take small pieces of crust at a time and press with fingers on the tin till all covered and bake in hot oven. When cold put in your cranberry sauce, then whipped cream on top.

"You will tell her, sir, that Dodson's is still sound," he faltered presently; "but, for a time, she must be content with less. I think we have touched the low-rate mark. We have still many loyal customers who swear by us. The rest is dogged work."

The old lawyer gravely inclined his head.

"Thank you, Lumley," he said softly. "I quite understand. In a few minutes Mary will be here. Will you call again in half an hour?"

Jim stood by the door of the office, gazing at the face of the little girl, as she sat in the chair by the desk. At his entrance the old lawyer took off his glasses, and applied himself to another polishing process. For some reason, when he spoke his voice was curiously subdued.

"Lumley, I have fully explained the position," he said. "It is for Miss Dodson to say what is to be done."

The girl rose and confronted him. He fancied that her face was unusually white. Although she was smiling, he could see that in her eyes showed the glimmer of moisture. She came towards him with outstretched hands.

"We mustn't let the old name come down, Jim," she said. "There's a matter of six or seven hundred—mostly insurance. I'm coming to help. If you will have me as a partner, 'J. L.' I'm coming to live at the shop."—London Answers.

PASSED ON.

Mr. Lammewell believed that to spare the rod spoil the child, therefore he kept in a certain closet a leather strap with which he administered punishment to his offspring when they committed any misdemeanor.

A few days ago he had occasion to need the strap, but it was missing from its usual place, and a thorough search of the entire house failed to discover it. Then he offered a reward of five cents to whomsoever of his olive branches could tell him what had become of the lost article.

"Gimme the five cents," cried four-year-old Tommy. "I know where it is."

When the coins were safely stowed away in his trousers' pocket he said, with much pride:

"I gave it to Willie Wilkin's father."

CUTTING!

Private Doolan, the regimental barber, was well known for his carelessness. One day, while shaving Pat Dougherty, he had the misfortune to cut his patron's cheek several times.

Pat took all these gashes in grave silence, but when the shave was over he walked over to his water-bottle, which he had filled with water, took a mouthful, and, with compressed lips, proceeded to shake his head from side to side.

"What's the matter? You ain't got the toothache?" asked the barber.

"Whist! I was only trying if my mouth would hold water without leaking!" replied Pat.

"You are a sharp boy, Tommy." "Well, I ought to be. Dad takes me into his study and strops me three or four times a week."

moved the body of the Lord. There was only one conclusion, that here had occurred a miracle, a resurrection. Up to this time the words of Jesus about his rising had had no meaning for them, and the scripture, which he had quoted concerning the necessity of his rising from the dead (9), had been received into dull, irresponsible hearts. But now all was clear. Even though as yet he has made no revelation of himself to them, they are convinced, and, without seeking further, they depart quietly to their own home (10) in the city. If they had seen nothing more in the succeeding days, their confidence would doubtless have been shaken, and John proceeds to describe how their faith in the resurrection was made impregnable.

11. Mary was standing without at the tomb—The two disciples had come and gone, and she had probably missed them in the streets of the city.

12. Two angels—John is particular to describe their exact posture and position. To ascribe this appearance of the angels and the appearance of Jesus to some mental vision is to overlook the fact that Mary was in no state of expectancy such as would make a vision natural. She was weeping. She believed her Lord's body had been taken away, and she was overwhelmed with grief (13). Her loving intention to perform those last kindly offices upon the dead body had been thwarted. In the self-absorption of her grief she fails to show any astonishment at the presence of these angelic messengers, and even takes it for granted that they and the "gardener" know instinctively to whom she refers in her sorrow.

13. Supposing him to be the gardener—There was something about our Lord's resurrection body that made it both possible and impossible for his most intimate friends to identify him. It was the same body, but there was about it a mystic wonder, and it was given a strangeness of powers, that made it altogether different (Matt. 28: 17; Mark 16: 12; Luke 24: 16 and 37; John 21: 4).

14. Mary—She had not waited for a reply to her anxious question, but had turned again toward the empty tomb. One word was sufficient to cause her to turn herself about, for that was not the voice of a mere acquaintance. Only one voice could pronounce it with that never-to-be-forgotten tenderness. Her answer, Rabboni, conveys more of reverence and affection than is found in the word Teacher. No doubt we should interpret it literally, "My Master."

MOTHER KNEW.

Mother—"I'm afraid Gwendoline is setting her heart on that young Penniless."

Father—"You think so?"

Mother—"I am almost sure of it."

Father—"Well, he is not a fit person for her to marry. He is as poor as a rat, and has no prospects. Something must be done to set her against him."

Mother—"I have thought of that, and have hit upon what I think is an excellent plan."

Father—"Yes. What is it?"

Mother—"We must tell her that we want her to marry him."

A girl's idea of a hero is a young man who asks her father for her hand.

cream; five pints fresh milk; one teaspoonful of pineapple flavoring. Beat eggs well and add sugar and beat again; add cream and beat again. Thin raisins with milk and stir thoroughly in freezer. Makes one gallon of ice cream fit for a royal family. There is no finer or cheaper fruit than ground raisins added to ice cream.

MEAT.

Meat Balls.—Take pieces of leftover meat, grind or chop. Soak twice as much dry bread as meat, mix together, and add one egg, salt and pepper to taste, a little chopped onion; mix into balls, roll in flour, and fry brown.

Squab Boston Style.—Singe, draw and truss half a dozen fine squabs. Fill them with a rich forcemeat of crumbs and fresh mushrooms moistened with cream and flavored with pepper and salt. Put the birds then into a roasting pan and cook rapidly for eighteen minutes. Take from the oven, untruss, and dress on a hot dish. Pour into the baking pan half a tumbler of currant jelly and set over the fire to heat. Serve in a sauce boat with the birds.

Baked Ham.—Cover your ham with cold water and simmer gently just enough to loosen the skin so that it can be pulled off. This will probably be from two to three hours, according to the size of your ham. When skinned, put in a dripping pan in the oven, pour over it a teaspoonful of vinegar and one of hot water, in which dissolve a teaspoonful of English mustard. Bake slowly, basting with the liquid, for two hours. Then cover the ham all over to the depth of one inch with coarse brown sugar, press it down firmly and do not baste again until the sugar has formed a thick crust, which it will soon do in a slow oven. Let it remain in a full hour after covering with the sugar, until it becomes a rich golden brown. When done, drain from the liquor in the pan and put on a dish to cool. When it is cool, but not cold, press by turning another flat dish on top with a weight over it. You will never want to eat ham cooked in any other way when you have tasted this, and the pressing makes it cut firmly for sandwiches or slicing.

Goose with Saurekraut.—Wipe out goose with a damp towel and fill with saurekraut, sew it up and tie into shape, place in a large kettle, cover with about two quarts of saurekraut and boiling water, simmer gently for three hours. At the end of this time take out the goose, place in baking pan, baste with melted butter, dredge the breast thickly with flour, put in the oven until a nice brown (about an hour). Serve in a bed of boiled saurekraut.

DISCOVERIES.

Original Dish.—Make from cold roast beef or any roast meat, and bowl of gravy. Chop the meat, not too fine, add gravy and a little onion, if liked. Then chop raw potatoes, grease a baking dish, put in a layer of potatoes and cover with the gravy mixture; then another layer of potatoes having gravy on top; sprinkle a few cracker crumbs and bake about forty minutes in a moderate oven.

Good Coffee Hint.—To one pound of ground coffee beat good two eggs, mix well, and let dry in a warm oven; care must be taken so as not to burn by stirring often. This thin hair, place a small piece of tulle or veiling across the top of the head. Open canned fruit or vegetables and pour into a dish several hours before they are served.

After washing a lamp chimney, polish with dry salt to make the glass brilliant and prevent it from cracking.

A few pieces of gum camphor kept in the boxes in which silver is packed in wrappings will prevent its turning dark.

A baker says that a cupful of liquid yeast is equivalent to half a compressed yeast cake or a whole dry yeast cake.

In baking bread or rolls put a saucepan of boiling water into the oven. The steam will keep the crust smooth and tender.

A great deal of rust can be prevented by leaving the oven door open after baking until all the moisture has evaporated.

Small pieces of raw potato in a little water shaken vigorously in side bottles and lamp chimneys will clean them admirably.

To get the full nutriment from a potato it should be cooked in the skin, as valuable food salts lie just inside the covering.

KING AND SPORT.

Has No Hankering After Reputation of Being a Sporting Man.

Although King George intends to bestow his formal encouragement upon the social aspect of the Turf, it is an open secret at the Court that he does not mean to elevate the sport of horse-racing to a supreme place in his personal interests. King George is a firm believer in physical recreations for the nation at large. He desires to make it clear that, so far as he is concerned, personal effort in recreation deserves a higher place in the estimation of the people than mere attendance at spectacular sports. He is very proud—and does not hesitate to say so to his intimates—of the title of "sportsman," but he has no hankering after the reputation of being a "sporting man." While, therefore, he will go down to Epsom for the summer meeting, and drive from Windsor to Ascot in traditional state, King George intends to give every special encouragement to other forms of sport as opportunity serves.

IMMENSE GAINS IN REVENUE

Comparative Returns for the Fiscal Year Show Record Increases

A despatch from Ottawa says: The official comparative statement of the Customs revenue of the twelve largest ports in the Dominion for the fiscal years ending March, 1910, and March, 1911, issued on Friday, perhaps better than any other means serves to show the tremendous gains made by the great ports of entry in the country.

Winnipeg, Vancouver and Windsor have made the largest increases pro rata during the past year.

The comparative statement follows, the first mentioned figures for each city being those for 1909-10, and the second those for 1910-11:

Montreal	16,327,801 19	18,330,183 22
Toronto	12,327,949 27	13,864,784 44

WHAT BRITAIN WILL GAIN.

Terms of the New Treaty Negotiated With Japan.

A despatch from London says: The new Anglo-Japanese commercial treaty, which was ratified at Tokio on Tuesday, provides for reductions in the rates of the new Japanese tariff on the chief British textile and metal imports in Japan. In the case of gray cotton tissues the duties are reduced from one-third to one-fourth, and on the most important tissues, pure wool and cotton mixed and linen yarns, a reduction of one-fifth is made. On certain classes of iron and steel plates, including galvanized sheets and timplates, there is a concession of from two-ninths to two-fifths per cent.; on pig iron one-sixth, and on paints one-third per cent. Specialties in Japanese manufacture will continue to be admitted to the United Kingdom duty free. The treaty will remain in force twelve years.

FARMER'S RASH ACT.

Was Despondent Over the Loss of His Home by Fire.

A despatch from Winnipeg says: Jos. Robertson, a farmer of Transcona, Man., was found walking into the city on Wednesday evening with his throat cut, and the constable who met him took him to the General of a store of gasoline. John Jones, night engineer, discovered the fire at the magazine, and went to the telephone to notify the chief engineer. He was returning when the explosion occurred, and he was thrown forty feet, sustaining injuries which will probably result fatally.

MONSTER AIRSHIP.

Will Carry Crew of 100 and 200 Passengers.

A despatch from Berlin, Germany, says: An airship intended for trans-Atlantic travel is projected here, and a company capitalized at $2,000,000 has been formed to finance the scheme. The proposed dirigible will be eight times larger than Zeppelin's new Deutschland. The plans call for a vessel 775 feet long, driven by thirty motors. It will be able to carry 200 passengers in addition to a crew of 100. Boerner, who designed the ship, claims that it will be able to travel from London to New York without a mishap.

EASTER

SOME FUN FOR EASTER.

Mothers who are planning Easter parties for the younger members of the household will find the description of this "bunny party" practical and capable of being carried out with very little labor.

There was a quaint old German legend of the Easter rabbit, and this party was planned to give the rabbit the prominence it has with the children of the "Fatherland." All grocers keep animal crackers, and will doubtless order a couple of pounds "all rabbits" for the occasion. Hide these all over the rooms and provide baskets or bags for the spoils. Allow twenty minutes for the hunt. For prizes award a book about rabbits or some one of the Easter novelties with which the shops are filled.

The next thing on the programme is a rabbit race. The children were told to stoop down like "bunnies," and when the bell rang to start to hop to the goal, which was a spot at the other end of the room. This is very amusing and gives a chance to award some more prizes.

Then each child is given a half-yard of ribbon, with which to make a bow to pin on a rabbit's neck. This may be a good-sized toy rabbit or it may be managed like the old-fashioned "donkey" party; only instead of pinning on the tail, the bow is pinned on the neck after the children are blindfolded.

If there is a blackboard the guests may be allowed to show their artistic talents by drawing a rabbit, each artist signing his or her name to the masterpiece. This will afford amusement for another thirty minutes. Slips of paper and pencils will answer if there is no blackboard.

Next arrange chairs as for "Going to Jerusalem," and place in the four corners of the room four rabbits. When the music stops the children make a dash for the bunnies, those securing the rabbits retiring from the game. The refreshments should consist of hard-boiled eggs, each one in a nest of water-cress, plain sandwiches, cocoa and cookies in the shape of rabbits.

THE MEANING OF EASTER.

There is a beautiful superstition which is believed by many, that on Easter morning the sunrise is more brilliant than on any other morning in the year—that he who rises early enough shall see a peculiar radiance upon the Easter sunrising.

This may not be literally true, but the meaning of the fancy is true—that the brightest glory of our lives is shed upon them from the first Easter morn.

And what is the source of the Easter glory?

It is not the conquest of earthly conquest, such as that for which the Jews were longing—the victory over their stern Roman rulers, which should overthrow the haughty alien power, and leave the Jews once more the dominant nation, intolerant of all others.

Nor is it for us the glory of triumph over our human enemies, though such triumphs may come, nor the gratification of our selfish desires, but the greater glory of self-renunciation, the victory of life over death; of life—real life—over the death of self; of victory over sin—sin, which is but selfishness in

His Home by Fire.

A despatch from Winnipeg says: Jos. Robertson, a farmer of Transcona, Man., was found walking into the city on Wednesday evening with his throat cut, and the constable who met him took him to the General Hospital, where he may recover. He told a rambling story of having lost his place at Transcona by fire, the damage being $2,000. He says he started to walk to the city at 11 o'clock in the morning and on the way went into an empty house and tried to cut his throat with a pocket knife. He lay down for a couple of hours, expecting to die, but got tired of waiting and set out again for the city. He has a brother at 24 Gordon street, Manchester, England. He is 40 years of age and unmarried.

OTTAWA SMALLPOX CASES

Dr. Bell Says the Disease Is Brought From the Lumber Camps.

A despatch from Ottawa says: Dr. Bell of the Provincial Board of Health arrived in Ottawa on Wednesday morning in response to Mayor Hopewell's appeal for assistance in coping with the smallpox invasion. The Provincial official is not alarmed at the presence of twenty-eight mild cases here. Owing to the great prevalence of the disease in the shanties, he says, it is only to be expected that a city in the centre of a lumbering district should be afflicted, due to cases coming down from the woods. Dr. Bell will remain in Ottawa as long as is necessary to see that proper measures are taken to prevent the spread of the disease. Four hospital tents have been erected.

SEVENTY MINERS KILLED

The Victims Mostly Foreigners, but Include Several Mine Managers

A despatch from Scranton, Pa., says: At least 70 mine workers lost their lives in the Dunmore vein, also China vein of the Pancroft colliery at Throop on Friday. Most of the men in the mine are foreigners. Seven mine officials, however, are among the victims.

The Dunmore vein of the mine is 750 feet below the surface, which greatly impedes the work of rescue, making fire fighting difficult. The colliery is owned by the Scranton Coal Company, affiliated with the New York, Ontario and Western Company.

The fire which caused the mine horror, broke out from some unknown cause in the engine-house at the foot of the shaft at about 10 o'clock on Friday morning. It is attributed to spontaneous combustion. At the time there were 300 men and boys in the various veins and chambers of the mine. The flames set off accumulations of gas which increased the difficulty and doubtless increased the loss of life. The scene at the mine is heartrending. About the head of the shaft were gathered thousands of people including the relatives and friends of the men entombed. Ropes had to be stretched to keep back the crowd and to prevent a stampede when the bodies were brought out.

Montreal, April 11.—Choice steers sold at 6½¢, good at 6 to 6½¢, fairly good at 5½ to 5½¢, fair at 5 to 5½¢, and the common at 4½ to 4½¢ per lb. Cows ranged from 3½ to 5½¢, and bulls from 4 to 5½¢ per lb. Hogs declined 20 to 30¢ per 100 lbs.

Toronto, April 11.—Sheep were selling within a range of $4.75 to $5 per cwt. for good ewes, and at $4 to $5 for bucks. Yearling lambs were weak at $6.50 to $7, and hogs were weak, though unchanged in price. Spring lambs were steady at $4 to $7.50. Choice steers and heifers sold as high as $6.75. Good butcher cattle are quotable at $5.75 to $6 per cwt., and cows and bulls from $4.75 to $5.50. Common cows and canners were slightly off.

COLORED GIRLS ARRIVE.

Sixty From Guadeloupe for Service in Montreal Families.

A despatch from New York says: Sixty negro girls from the Island of Guadeloupe, of the French West Indies, arrived here on Wednesday on the S. S. Konora on their way to Montreal for service as domestics in French-Canadian families. Another instalment has been engaged to leave the same port on the steamship Parima about a fortnight hence, also bound for Canada.

umph over our human enemies, though such triumphs may come, nor the gratification of our selfish desires, but the greater glory of self-renunciation, the victory of life over death; of life—real life—over the death of self; of victory over sin—sin, which is but selfishness in its multitudinous forms.

When Christ died on Calvary—when Christ determined to die on Calvary—the victory was complete, though not apparent to the world until He rose again upon the Easter morning free, perfectly free, no longer even to be tempted by any selfish human feeling.

Through this death and victory He makes it gloriously possible that we shall attain to victory over self, shall rise superior to self, that we may shine as lights in the world holding forth the word of life.

And if our lights are feeble, if self still holds us down, the Easter morning tells us that it need not be so, that greater things are in store for us, even the fulfilment of our highest ideals.

"Who doth himself in Christ's grave lay,
Shall rise with Christ on Easter Day.
Who conquers self for others' need,
Hath risen with Jesus, risen indeed.
Who selfishness at the cross lays down,
Shall share with his Saviour the robe and the crown."

EVER TASTE A TANSY?

Easter was once the great cake-eating festival of the year, and even now the custom survives to a certain extent, as witness the Good Friday hot cross bun.

This is really a relic of pagan times. Before the Christian religion was introduced into England, our Saxon forefathers ate little cakes in honor of their goddess Eastre, and the clergy, unable to prevent the people from following their old custom, sought to expel the old paganism by marking them with a cross.

Tansy cakes are still made and eaten in some parts of England, but not to anything like the extent they once were. Two or three hundred years ago the poorest table was piled high at Eastertide with "tansies," as they were called for short, and it was customary for the lads and lassies to compete for the tasty morsels.

An old verse commemorates this custom:

At stool-ball, Lucy, let us play,
For sugar, cakes, or wine;
Or for a tansy let us pay,
The loss be thine or mine.

Tansies were merely ordinary cakes flavored with tansy flowers, which gives them a peculiar bitter-sweet taste.

Simmel cakes, another ancient Eastertide dainty, partake something of the nature of both a cake and a pudding, with a slight suggestion of pie added. The outer crust is of fine flour, mixed with sufficient saffron to stain it a deep yellow color, while the inside resembles a very rich plum-pudding. The cakes are first boiled for several hours, then baked.

GIFTS FOR THE DAY.

Easter is now observed almost as universally as Christmas, and it is quite the custom to send gifts mostly in the way of flowers, plants, candy or a novelty egg containing a little gift. Books done up in white paper tied with white and yellow ribbon making very acceptable tok-

TWENTY-FIVE LIVES LOST

Cargo of a Passenger Vessel Listed in a Severe Gale

A despatch from Victoria, B. C., says: The steamer Iroquois (Capt. Sears), which plies between Sydney, 15 miles north of here, and the Gulf Islands, was wrecked shortly after 9 o'clock on Monday morning, and a number of passengers and members of the crew were drowned, estimates varying from 20 to 25, including eight women. There were between 30 and 40 passengers aboard, and the crew numbered 12. Capt. Sears came ashore with a number of others who were saved on a raft, which was part of the wreck.

The accident occurred in the channel near Mary Island, opposite Capt. Curtis' house, which has been turned into a morgue and hospital. Capt. Curtis put off in his launch and saved a number of lives. Geo. and Clifford Brethour, of Sydney, also put out launches and did good rescue work. Many Indians also assisted in canoes.

When the Iroquois foundered part of the upper works were left above water and people ashore could see the survivors clinging to this portion of the wreck. The swirl of the waters soon tore off the housework, the scene being covered with wreckage and people struggling for their lives. Of the bodies which drifted ashore many were equipped with life belts.

The first of the survivors to be landed was Capt. Sears, of the wrecked boat, who, with the mate, Isbister, and two Indians belonging to the crew, were towed ashore. The boat is believed to have foundered in comparatively shallow water, her boilers blowing up and part of her housework remaining unsubmerged.

ens. In Europe Easter is the most widely celebrated of all the many festival days. The people of Paris "make to themselves the duty of being happy," which we can all surely try to do, and the best way will be to try to remember some one of whom no one else will think. Easter is the one day in the calendar that calls for unqualified praise:

It is a pretty fashion to be glad;
Joy is the grace we say to God.

FOR AN EASTER LUNCHEON.

The table was round and the centre-piece most attractive, being a basket of individual bouquets of violets, from which a ribbon of violet hue ran to each plate. Little egg-shaped booklets with violet-colored pencils attached were passed to the guests before going to the dining-room. A transposed menu was written as it is given below, and the one who first transposed it received a prize of a violet stick-pin:

O Maul Castor Poet.
Had Basked Ma's Troupe Bade To.
Lamps Boar String In Creased
Moon.

Serge Van Halo.
Ten Cols Cheer Quick. Yard Sell Sea.

I meant a Crane Police Spoken
Cage.
Cache Tool.

The correct menu is:

Clear Tomato Soup.
Baked Shad, Bermuda Potatoes.
Roast Spring Lamb. Creamed
Onions.
Orange Halves.
Chicken Croquettes. Celery Salad.
Neapolitan Ice Cream. Sponge
Cake.
Chocolate.

At the finish of the repast the ribbons were drawn, bringing each guest a bouquet of violets. The bottom of the basket contained Easter eggs of white, on which appropriate sentiments were inscribed with gold ink.

The capture was made by Victor Cheveau, the fish and game warden, and Captain Dunn, in the tug McCarthy, which is doing patrol duty pending the fitting out for the season of the cruiser Vigilant, the Government patrol boat. The Eagle had on board 3,000 pounds of fish and 30 boxes of net twine. All of this with the tug, has been confiscated, and will be held pending a settlement of the affair in court. The crew is here.

NEW BRITISH NAVAL GUN.

It is a Decided Improvement on the 13.5-Inch Gun.

A despatch from London says: The Admiralty, by way of replying to the adoption of the fourteen-inch gun abroad, has ordered experiments with a new gun, which is a decided improvement on the 13.5-inch gun with which the Dreadnoughts under construction are to be fitted. The new weapon will be styled a 14-inch gun, but will, in fact, be of 15 inch diameter and fifty calibre.

GOVERNOR OF AUSTRALIA.

Lord Denman Will Follow the Example of the King.

A despatch from London says: Lord Denman, the new Governor of Australia, speaking here, said, while going new to the work, he had the advantage of having been for four years in the personal service of King Edward, also having personally served King George, who knew the Britons overseas as no previous King knew them. Australia strongly believed in her own future as a nation, and, above all, was loyal in her attachment to the King and the Empire.

ARNPRIOR CHIEF ARRESTED.

Authorities Were Waiting for Alleged Embezzler's Recovery.

A despatch from Arnprior says: Charged with the embezzlement of $11,246 of the funds of the town of Arnprior, Chief of Police John Mattson was arrested Saturday afternoon, arraigned before Magistrate Burwash and committed for trial. He was taken to the county jail in Pembroke on Saturday night by Constable Cousineau to await his trial. The chief did not plead, the commitment being made by agreement between counsels representing the prosecution and his solicitor.

A despatch from Ottawa says: The contract for the Quebec Bridge was on Wednesday awarded to the St. Lawrence Bridge Company, an amalgamation of the Dominion Bridge Company of Montreal and the Canadian Bridge Company of Walkerville. The cost of the bridge, according to the estimate of the engineers on the company's figures for the various parts of the work, will be $8,650,000. There has been deposited with the Government as security for carrying out the project, $1,097,500, or 15 per cent. of the contract price. The award is made on the recommendation of a majority of a board of engineers, who have had the matter under consideration for over a year. They have recommended the acceptance of the tender of the St. Lawrence Bridge Company upon a design of their own, which includes provision for street railway and driveway. Hon. Mr. Graham believes that the very best possible contract has been made, and that these purely Canadian companies are fully competent to accomplish the task they have undertaken.

As the Province of Quebec contributed $250,000 and the city of Quebec $300,000 to the original bridge scheme, as subsidy for the construction of the roadways, Mr. Graham recommends that these amounts should be returned.

$3,600 in Cash Prizes for Farmers

ARE you one of the thousands of Canadian farmers who have used or intend using Canada Cement for the construction of some farm utility? If you contemplate building anything whatsoever of concrete, make up your mind right now to build it with a view to winning one of the prizes we are offering. Read the rest of this announcement and you will learn how you may try for a share in the $3,600 we are giving away, to encourage the use of cement upon the farm. Throughout Canada the farmers have taken such a keen interest in our campaign that it has inspired us to go further along these educational lines. We have decided, therefore, to offer a series of four $100.00 prizes to each of the nine Provinces, to be awarded as follows:

PRIZE "A"—$100.00 to be given to the farmer in each Province who will use during 1911 the greatest number of bags of "CANADA" Cement for actual work done on his farm.

PRIZE "B"—$100.00 to be given to the farmer in each Province who uses "CANADA" Cement on his farm in 1911 for the greatest number of purposes.

PRIZE "C"—$100.00 to be given to the farmer in each Province who furnishes us with a photograph showing best of any particular kind of work done on his farm during 1911 with "CANADA" Cement.

PRIZE "D"—$100.00 to be given to the farmer in each Province who furnishes the best and most complete description of how any particular piece of work shown by photograph sent in, was done.

In this contest no farmer should refrain from competing, because of any feeling that he may have little chance against his neighbor who he thinks might use more cement than he does.

For it will be noted that Prizes "C" and "D" have no bearing whatever on quantity of cement used. The man who sends us the best photograph of so small a thing as a watering trough or a hitching post, has as much chance for Prize "C" as a man who sends a photograph of a house built of cement—and the same with Prize "D" as to best description.

Canada Cement is handled by dealers in almost every town in Canada. Should there not happen to be a dealer in your locality, let us know and we will try to appoint one.

Contest will close on November 15th, 1911, and all photos and descriptions must be in our office by that date. Awards will be made as soon as possible thereafter. The jury of award will consist of: Prof. Peter Gillespie, Lecturer in Theory of Construction, University of Toronto; W. H. Day, Professor of Physics, Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph; and Ivan S. Macdonald, Editor of "Construction."

Now, you cannot hope to do concrete work to the best advantage unless you have a copy of our free book, entitled, "What the Farmer Can Do With Concrete." This book tells how to construct well-nigh anything on the farm, from hitching post to silo. Whether you enter the contest or not, you'll find this book most helpful. A post-card asking for the book will bring it to you promptly. Send for your copy to-night. From your cement dealer or from us, you can obtain a folder containing full particulars of contest. If you send to us for it, use the coupon provided in this announcement.

Please send me full particulars of Prize Contest. Also a copy of "What the Farmer Can Do With Concrete."

The Mikado's Title.

The ruler of Japan really should be called ten-o, not mikado. The latter means "royal gate" and is a title somewhat similar to sublime porte, which is used indifferently to mean the Turkish sultan, his government or the country itself. Ten-o means "heaven's highest," a title surpassing all the most grandiloquent European efforts. The original Japanese equivalent for ten-o is soumelamikoto, but the former is universally used, perhaps on account of its brevity.

No Reason to Worry.

"I once played the part of Venus in a pantomime," said the lady who showed her age and was beginning to have a mustache.

"Well, I wouldn't let it worry me," replied the one who was still fair to look upon. "Venus was only a myth, so, of course, you didn't hurt her feelings."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Ruins of Yucatan.

The explorations of Arthur Diosy in Yucatan brought to light many new facts about the stupendous ruins which stretch through the country in a chain 300 miles long. The most amazing thing about these ruins, according to Mr. Diosy, is that the people who possessed such high architectural skill and the knowledge of rich and graceful decorative arts, belonged to the stone age and had no knowledge of metals. These wonders in stone were carved with flint implements and a civilization which has been compared to that of Egypt grew up without even the use of bronze and iron.

Turned the Tables.

Two hunters, returning from the Catskills, decided to try some New York city humor upon the agent of a little railroad station in the foothills.

"When does the 3:49 train get in?" asked one.

The old man regarded him seriously and at length. "Waal," said he, "she generally gets in just a leetle behind the engine."

Later they approached him respectfully. "About time that train is due, isn't it, uncle?"

"Yes," said the agent, "she's about due. There comes the conductor's dog."—Everybody's.

WOOD PULP PAPER.

Forced Into Use by the Scarcity of Rag Stock.

In the early days of printing it was hardly possible to employ anything but first class paper in making books, for the reason that wood fiber and wood pulp paper had not then come into use. At that time good cotton and linen rags were turned into fine, firm, pure white paper, well able to withstand indefinitely the yellowing and disintegrating effects of time.

As the increase in the demand for printing paper grew apace it was soon found that there were not enough rags to go round. Thus wool pulp came into use.

All vegetable fiber is suitable for paper making, whether it be obtained from rags, wood, esparto grass, straw or other substances. When these fibers are torn apart they are clogged with gum, a substance that must be thoroughly dissolved and washed away by chemicals if the best results are to be obtained.

Wood pulp paper is made of finely ground wood, usually spruce, the grinding being done with a beating engine, run at high speed, and huge stones between which the wood is reduced to a kind of pulp. That done, it is made up into paper without any preliminary removal of the gum or other deleterious ingredients.—Harper's Weekly.

ELECTRIC FOGHORNS.

Which May Be Blown Without Effort by Pressing a Push Button.

The time honored foghorn and still the one in most common use on myriads of smaller boats is of the sort that you raise to your lips and blow. Tolerably hard work blowing a foghorn.

Bigger foghorns for larger boats are set in a box, the box containing a bellows by which the horn is blown. Attached to the bellows is an outside lever by means of which the bellows is operated by hand. A lot of noise this foghorn makes, to be heard for a considerable distance.

There are now made, used on many power boats and yachts, electric foghorns the operating of which calls for the exercise of neither lung nor hand power. In these horns there is attached, inclosed at the smaller end, a metallic diaphragm to which is connected an electric coil which when electricity is turned into it vibrates the diaphragm and sounds the horn. Electricity is supplied from a storage battery or from current generated on the boat if it is electrically equipped. To blow an electric foghorn you simply press a button.—New York Sun.

A STRANGE PILGRIMAGE.

Roumanian Peasants Go to Cure Ills By Sleeping by Heating Plant.

"The weirdest pilgrimage on earth," is the phrase in which a writer describes the ceremony that takes place once a year on the night of the Ascension in Roumania.

On a great arid plain to the north-east of the town of Fargu-Gin grows a wonderful plant, termed by the natives Fraisinel, or "the healer." The peasants believe that a night—this one night of the year—spent among the plants will cure all ills, and they flock to the place by thousands. It was to see this pilgrimage without a parallel that a writer in The Wide World visited the place on the eve of the Ascension.

PRINCE OF TRAVELERS.

Bronze Statue of Celebrated Venetian Found in Canton.

The name Marco Polo is the most remarkable in the history of travel, though the individual in his dim personality can hardly rank as one of the greatest men among explorers. Yet he has his own real, undisputable and unique claims to glory. He was the first traveler to trace a route across the whole longitude of Asia, naming and describing kingdom after kingdom from the shores of Cilicia to the Yellow Sea—the first traveler to reveal China in all its wealth and vastness, with its mighty rivers, its huge cities, its swarming population and rich manufactures; to tell us of the nations on its borders, with their eccentricities of manners and worship; of Tibet, of Burma, of Laos, of Siam, of Cochinchina, of Japan; the first to speak of that museum of wonder and beauty, the Indian Archipelago; of Java, the pearl of islands; of Sumatra; of Ceylon with its Mountain of Adam; of India, not as a mythical region, but as a country seen and partially explored; of the secluded Christian kingdom of Abyssinia; of Zanzibar, Madagascar and Socotra; and, in remotely opposite quarters, of the high plateaus of Palmyra, with their wild sheep; of Siberia and the Arctic ocean; of white bears, sledge-dogs and reindeer-riding Tunguses. That all these should be the revelations of one man and one book surely accounts for and justifies the author's high place on the roll of fame, without our seeking to invest him with imaginary attributes.

In recognition of his services to the Chinese Emperor, a bronze statue of this celebrated Venetian traveler was placed in the temple of "the 500 Genii," or Disciples of Buddha, at Canton. The floor of the temple is of marble, and the tables and chairs are all either marble or ebony. There is an inner court where under huge plantain trees the monks having the guardianship of the temple spend all their leisure. There is also a lotus pool in the centre, which is a vision of loveliness when the sacred blossoms are in bloom. Finally, there is the Lo-hangtang, or Hall of Saints, full of solemn brooding figures. The interior of the inner shrine is very dim and dark and mysterious, and the air is heavy with the perfume of incense.

Marco Polo died in Venice in 1326, but the vast compass of his travels and his romantic stories had already inspired the then known world, and resulted in the many notable discoveries.

"He cleared the sill at a bound and vanished in the darkness," related Romance breathlessly.
"But," scoffed Realism, "only a moment ago he was riveted to the spot. Did he file the rivets?"
"Oh, no!" rejoined Romance, nothing daunted. "Fortunately it was only a small spot, so that by a superhuman effort he wrenched it loose and carried it along with him."—Puck.

was to see this pilgrimage without a parallel that a writer in The Wide World visited the place on the eve of the Ascension.
People from all parts of western Roumania visit the place of miraculous cures. Arrived at the ground where the plant is mostly to be found, each party hunts out a root. At dusk a clean white sheet is spread near it and the sick person, also in white, takes his place upon it. Three holy candles are then placed about the plant, as also a bowl of water.
Then the patient—by proxy, for he must not speak a word from the time he lies down until he gets up the following morning—says the prayers used on this occasion. These are chanted by old women known as "matuza," or aunts, and should be repeated fifteen times in order to effect a cure. These aunts act in turn for different persons, receiving from each a loaf of bread and whatever else the sick person can afford to give.
The pilgrim sleeps all night with his head close to the stalks of the magic plant. In the morning, immediately after sunrise, the bowl must be examined, for if this happens to contain fresh leaves or flowers of the plant, then the augury is good and the patient will eventually recover.
If, however, it contains dead leaves, bits of earth, sand, or the like, then the portent is death, and that soon.
